Last Vestige of Government Withers as Ras Nasibu, Turk General Flee to French Territory

WASHINGTON, May 4.—(AP)—Defenders of the American legation at Addis Ababa for three riotous days hung grimly to their post tonight despite State Department instructions to abandon the diplomatic mission and take shelter at the British legation.

Upon receipt of an urgent message from Secretary Hull to abandon the legation in the interest of safety, the American minister, Cornelius Van H. Engert, notified the State Department that he felt the mission should not be evacuated except as a last resort.

Earlier, the British legation had advised, through London and the State Department, that it would be unable to send soldiers and guns from its own guard to aid in defense of the American legation.

The British offered, however, to send a military convoy to assist in the evacuation.

Pedestrian Is Killed; Ran Into Path of Car

Charles H. Kendrick, about 60, of 633 Lawton street, S. W., was instantly killed at 8:45 o'clock last night when struck on Gordon street, near Lawton street, by an automobile driven by Dr. David O. Thompson, of 1454 Emory road, N. E. Two radio patrolmen going to the scene were injured when their car collided with another machine at Oak and Peoples streets.

Kendrick, witnesses told police, apparently became confused and ran into the path of the doctor's machine, which was said to be traveling at a moderate speed.

His death marks the 21st fatal accident within the city limits since January 1, the last having occurred April 21.

Police placed a technical charge of reckless driving against Dr. Thompson, who made bond of $500.

The injured patrolmen are M. V. Moss and Charles P. Whaley. Moss reported that the other car was driven by R. N. Entrenkin, 21, of 839 Lee street. Moss and Whaley both suffered lacerations, bruises and other injuries. Entrenkin was charged with reckless driving and released on his own recognizance.

Ethiopian Situation Told in Paragraphs

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON—Secretary of State Hull sent a wireless message to the American minister in Addis Ababa to evacuate the American legation after the British legation was unable to furnish troops for its defense.

ADDIS ABABA—American staff besieged in legation by marauding tribesmen; refuse to evacuate; two native servants wounded and situation reported growing worse.

DJIBOUTI—Emperor Haile Selassie sails aboard British cruiser for Palestine to take up exile. Ras Nasibu, southern general, arrives.

LONDON—British government directs its armed legation in Addis Ababa to aid American legation.

PARIS—French Ethiopian legation apparently successfully withstands assault; minister reports Italian plane fell. Fears mass attack.

ROME—Advance troops enter suburbs of Addis Ababa; Mussolini in incumbent position to grant this request in so far as it lay in their power.

Emperor Haile Selassie—now an emperor in name only—and his family and official party steamed from Djibouti, French Somaliland, toward Haifa, Palestine, aboard the British cruiser Enterprise en route to Jerusalem. It was Haile Selassie's own wish to go to Palestine.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, announcing to the house of commons the government's action to meet the emperor's desire, said the British "felt it incumbent upon them to grant this request in so far as it lay in their power."

Eden added: "The emperor naturally will be expected, while in Palestine, to participate in any way in the furtherance of hostilities."

The foreign secretary said he had no more information when asked.

METHODIST GROUP VOTES TO APPROVE UNIFICATION PLAN

Proposal To Be Studied by Protestant Branch; Act Termed First Step Toward Healing 'Splits.'

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 4.—(AP)—The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church was committed tonight to a program of unification with other Methodist branches to form the world's largest Protestant body—a Methodist church having 8,000,000 members in 42 countries.

Conference delegates voted, 470 to 83, to approve the program of union with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church after their leaders visioned in pleas for the merger the possible union of all Protestant churches into a single denomination.

Goes to Southern Church.
The unification proposal goes now to the annual conferences of the southern church and the Methodist Protestant church, with final ratification possible in 1938 at the general conference of the southern church. The Methodist Protestant general conference convenes May 20 at High Point, North Carolina.

The vote today was an initial step toward healing two great splits in the Methodist church—the separation of the Methodist Protestant church in 1821 over the question of lay representation, and the division between the northern and southern churches in 1844 because of a dispute over slave ownership.

Liberal leaders led a bitter fight over provisions for dividing the united church into six jurisdictions, with negro churches segregated in a separate jurisdiction. They declared the provision was "racial discrimination of the ugliest kind."

Bishop William F. McDowell of Washington venerable Methodist bishop who 12 years ago presented a plan of unification which passed both the northern and southern general conferences and failed by only a few votes of winning final ratification, offered the program of union to the delegates today.

"Let me see this approved from the session early in June, the senate recessed today until Thursday to give its members an unrestricted opportunity to concentrate on committee work. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority leader, in moving the recess, listed the tax and civil appropriations bills among the major pieces of legislation which must be whipped through."

The deficiency appropriation bill, containing the new $100,000,000 relief fund requested by President Roosevelt, is another key measure "which must be passed before the session adjourns. Leaders said it would be ready for house floor debate late this week. It still must be acted on by the senate. The tax and naval bills have been approved by the house."

ANTI-TAX TACTICS LAID TO PACKERS

U. S. Chamber Representatives Urge Scrapping of Present Legislation.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—(AP)—Interrupting witnesses appearing in opposition to the tax bill, Chairman Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, of the senate finance committee, today accused meat packers of using "propaganda tactics intended to 'delay' the legislation."

In the midst of renewed hammering against the revenue measure by spokesmen for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Harrison read extracts from a letter described as written by the Institute of American Meat Packers. He said it advised its members "buy a railroad ticket to Washington and stay there," and suggested efforts be made to testify before the committee.

Carrying forward the drive to wind up the session early in June, the senate recessed today until Thursday to give its members an unrestricted opportunity to concentrate on committee work. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority leader, in moving the recess, listed the tax and civil appropriations bills among the major pieces of legislation which must be whipped through.

The deficiency appropriation bill, containing the new $100,000,000 relief fund requested by President Roosevelt, is another key measure "which must be passed before the session adjourns. ITALIAN VANGUARD ENTERS SUBURBS OF RAZED CAPITAL

Homeland Is Ordered To Celebrate Victory Today; "Triumph Is Ours Alone," World Warned.

ROME, May 4.—(AP)—A reliable source reported tonight an advance guard of Askari (native) Italian troops under the command of General Alessandro Pirzio Birelli entered the suburbs of Addis Ababa late this afternoon.

The same source said the main body of Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio's northern army arrived at the ridges about 16 miles from the Ethiopian capital and joined the 15,000 native soldiers.

It was believed in the Italian capital Addis Ababa will be formally occupied tomorrow.

Plan of Occupation.
The plan of occupation, this reliable source said, will be to send the selected troops of Marshal Badoglio to the city under the protection of 150 airplanes.

The news the Askari vanguard had already reached the outskirts of Addis Ababa was not expected to be published here until tomorrow.

This follows the government plan to hold back publication of the occupation of Ethiopian territory until the Italian positions have been consolidated and the danger of counter attacks passed.

In military circles it was felt, however, the Askari had pushed ahead with the hope of alleviating the distressing conditions among foreigners in the riot-stricken city.

It was understood airplanes from bases behind the Italian lines were flown over the city again today and had reported the Askari troops well placed on the outskirts of the capital so the count take over the city at a given command.

Orders Celebrations.
The report of the entry of the first of the northern blackshirt warriors came as the government in Rome was reported taking what it believes to be "adequate measure" for the protection and release of foreigners in the city.

LEE TRIAL BEGUN

By LAMAR Q. BALL.
Robert E. S. Lee, some times known as the Earl of Pelham, lashed out bitterly yesterday against Benjamin R. Bradley, fugitive president of the defunct American Bond & Share Corporation, as the first trial commenced which promises to air the methods of a business which offered its investors 113 per cent dividends.

Lee's trial before Federal Judge William H. Barrett, in a special division of the United States district court, began yesterday morning and in four hours Lee's numerous motions to block the trial had been overruled. A jury had been drawn and the first witness had been heard.

Victim of Snake Bite At 'Faith Meet' Dies

BARTOW, Fla., May 4.—(AP)—Alfred Weaver, 35-year-old intendant, bitten by a rattlesnake during a "faith" demonstration here last night, died today.

He had declined medical treatment even after the hand on which he was bitten turned purple and his arm was swollen to the shoulder.

During a revival meeting conducted by George Hensley, who frequently has handled reptiles in the course of his demonstrations, Weaver picked the snake from a box.

It lashed out at him and struck him.

The snake was killed today.

'AVOID FACTIONS,' GRAND JURY TOLD

New Jurors Sworn in by Judge Howard, Who Tells Them He'll Retire.

Praising the March-April grand jury presentations for their moderation and intelligence, Judge G. H. Howard yesterday swore in a new grand jury which he warned not to align itself with political factionalism.

Nelson T. Spratt, of 1151 Sylan road, prominent businessman, was elected foreman, and John O. Childs, of 587 Twentieth street, N. E., a realtor, was named secretary. Only 22 members were chosen.

Judge Howard, in a long charge, told the new jurors they will find that liquor is involved in practically every case coming before them but he added that "there are some laws on which I need not charge you. The people seem to have a most popular pastime and such a charge might possibly hit too close to some grand jury."

Judge to Retire.
He reiterated his intention of retiring from the bench after this term, Paul S. E. ridge Sr. and Edgar Watkins Sr. have both declared they will see his place.

The new grand jury met in a brief routine session after being sworn in and charged, returning four true bills after electing the foreman and secretary.

Beside Spratt and Childs, grand jurors are J. F. Lord, Route 5, Collins district; J. R. Mangham, 988 Lanier boulevard, N. E.; Councilman William G. Hastings, manager of the Ansley hotel; Wiley L. Moore, president of the Wofford Oil Company; J. A. Bankston, of 96 Twenty-sixth street, investment broker; W. C. Meredith, of 1153 St. Charles place, N. E., president of Meredith & Company; J. H. Thompson, of 367 Tazor street, mechanic; Thomas E. Tinsinger, of Maddox & Tinsinger Realty Company.

Georgia Publisher Dies at Augusta

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 4.—(AP)—James C. Chiriac, publisher of the Augusta Herald and the Athens Banner-Herald, died at his residence here last night from the effects of a week's illness.

4-Month-Old Group Is Deposed by Vote of 31 to 4; Substitute Body To Be Appointed Today to Control the Department.

REVOCATION ORDER IS RULED ILLEGAL

Chief Executive, Police Head Accused of Protecting Drunks by Deposed Board Chairman.

The 1936 police committee of city council yesterday was abolished and Mayor Key was given free rein in appointment of a new five-member committee on public safety to control and administer the department.

Councilman action followed a stinging indictment of the mayor and Police Chief T. O. Sturdivant by Councilman G. Dan Bridges, chairman of the police committee, which Key named less than four months ago to direct police affairs.

Bridges' accusations, however, were ignored as council moved promptly in an effort to wash out the tangled and strife-torn affairs of the original group.

To Name Body Today.
Key announced he will select his new committee today, and gave no indication as to whom he will name to membership on the group.

The safety committee was created by a vote of 31 for to only four against. Last week, Bridges, casting the dissenting ballots. "This is an unprecedented procedure for this council," Bridges said in rising to defend his four-year regime as head of the police committee. "Council has never before in my memory fired a man for doing his plain duty. Last week the chief came to see the mayor and said there should be a change in the committee personnel."

The only thing I have done as a member of the committee is to vote to fire every drunk who came before it. The chief evidently did not want them fired and that's the trouble. Pass this thing back to Mayor Key. It's his responsibility and he ought to have the courage to face it without putting the responsibility on this council."

Text of the ordinance which council passed follows:

WASHINGTON, May 4.—(P)—The Navy Department today announced that Ensign Hugh N. Bondwee, of Bronxville, N. Y., a naval reserve aviator, was killed when his plane crashed in the sea at 11:50 a. m., Atlanta time.

Bondwee was on active duty at the aircraft carrier Saratoga which is participating in Pacific maneuvers with the battle fleet in the region of the Panama Canal.

PERSIA BOMBS REBELS TO PROTECT RAILROAD

BAGHDAD, May 4.—(P)—Officials announced tonight that government planes have been sent to bomb insurgents who cut the railroad between Baghdad and Basrah.

Troops have also been sent to round up the rebel tribesmen, officials declared.

The tribes rose up in the vicinity of Rumaitha, firing shots at a locomotive and then cutting the rail line. Authorities said the trouble had been started by propaganda agitators.

MRS. SANGER REPORTS SUCCESSSES IN INDIA

NEW YORK, May 4.—(P)—Mrs. Margaret Sanger, birth control advocate, said tonight she accomplished more in spreading her gospel in a nine-week visit to India than she has in 22 years' crusading through the United States.

"The public is prone to look upon India as a backward nation," she pointed out. "Well, as a result of my trip there the women of the country have established 50 clinics to disseminate information on birth control and 45 medical associations have accepted my teachings."

"I can't say as much for this country," she said.

In Wardha, India, she chatted with Mahatma Gandhi, "disciple of the poor," and Tagore, the poet.

Both gave me encouragement and support," Mrs. Sanger said.

Appeals Court Candidate QUILLIAN ENTERS RACE FOR APPELLATE COURT

Winder Attorney Seeks Place
Vacated by Judge W.
Frank Jenkins.

Joe Quillian, of Winder, yesterday announced his candidacy for the court of appeals to succeed Judge W. Frank Jenkins, who has announced for the supreme court.

This will be Quillian's third race for the court, he having opposed two judges for re-election in 1930 and 1934.

Others who have announced for the judgeship being vacated by Judge Jenkins are Judge E. S. Anit, of Cedar-town; Jule W. Felton, of Montezuma; J. D. Bradwell, of Athens; Sam Mathews, of Fort Valley, and Judge Frank Harwell, of Decatur. Assistant Attorney General Dave M. Parker, of Waycross, also is understood to be planning to make the race.

A native of Dalton, Quillian, the son of a Methodist preacher, has lived in Atlanta, Decatur, Newnan, Washington, LaGrange, Madison, Thomson, Carrollton, Buford and Lawrenceville before settling in Winder 19 years ago.

He was educated at the South Georgia College, McRae, and at Emory College, Oxford, Ga., and is the only male member of his family who is not a preacher.

In announcing for office Quillian said:

"In this race I do not oppose any man now in office and my friends assure me I have a splendid chance to be elected from the large field of candidates. I candidly believe that practically all of the 119,500 voters who cast their ballots for me in 1934 will do so again, knowing it is my desire to serve the people of this state on one of its appellate benches. It is my ambition to accomplish that while my father, who is 82, and my mother, who is 77, are still alive."

Chairman and Secretary of New Grand Jury 'AVOID FACTIONALISM,' GRAND JURY IS TOLD

William C. Evans, of 1007 Boulevard, S. E., clerk; L. I. Epperson, of 938 Dill avenue, operator for the Georgia Power Company; Jackson P. Lock, divisional manager for the Georgia Power Company; Robert L. Foreman, of 69 Twenty-sixth street, insurance company executive; J. McHenson, of 642 Cresthill avenue, cottonseed products dealer; Councilman John T. Scott, of 699 Pryor street, employed by the Southern Railway; W. C. Bryan, of Route 4, Bryan's district; Gordon Ragan, of 879 White street, an office manager; C. E. Steed, of Center Hill, Southern Bell Company employee; V. O. Rankin, of 502 North Highland avenue, N. E.; E. F. Adams, of 405 Holderness street, and F. W. Allcorn, of 126 The Prado.

Judge Howard told the jurors they may investigate anything they wish, even to the extent of recommending that the League of Nations be abolished, but that they should avoid political factionalism.

He said the presentments of the last grand jury, returned last Friday, were moderate and showed deep thought and consideration in the conclusions and recommendations.

The jurist told the jury that there must be an interest taken by the public in governmental affairs before factionalism is eliminated. He commended the last grand jury for praising the work of several county department heads.

Commenting on the liquor situation, Judge Howard pointed out that sobriety is brought about through the people being educated to temperance.

Here in Georgia we want hard liquor, it seems," he asserted. "Wines and liquors are not quick enough for the crowd in this state. They want to get drunk fast." The judge put emphasis on every case, ever sent to the criminal court, before his court are young, too young even to grow beards, but that liquor is involved in the majority of the cases. There was liquor in every case I ever sent to the electric chair, except perhaps one," Judge Howard said.

CITY PLANNERS TOLD LAWS NEED CHANGING

RICHMOND, Va., May 4.—(P)—Harold S. Buttenheim, editor of The American City, told the national planning conference today that under zoning ordinances in some American cities 100,000 persons could be housed on less than one-tenth of a square mile.

"The city of New York, though high in the hierarchy of sinners, is not the only or indeed the worst offender as to permissible land-overcrowding with residential buildings," he said. "In several cities it is legally possible for a developer to erect on a one-acre plot a residential building having a bulk of more than 4,000,000 cubic feet, which would house more than 1,600 persons."

He said such housing programs promoted "an obviously needless and absurd degree of congestion" and declared zoning ordinances in most cities need drastic revision.

Buttenheim was among eight speakers today on city planning in relation to housing and zoning programs.

5 LONG TERM CONVICTS ESCAPE N. C. PRISON

KENANSVILLE, N. C., May 4.—(P)—Five long-term prisoners overpowered a guard today and escaped from the Kenansville state prison camp.

Sam Coley, the guard, was thrown to the ground and disarmed, but was not injured. He said two prisoners seized him as he stepped from a truck which had stopped alongside a work gang.

Three of those escaping were Kenneth Hughes, serving 30 years for bank robbery; Horace Nichols, also serving 30 years, and Leo Pollard, under sentence of 15 years.

The prisoners took a shotgun and a pistol from the guard.

FINGERPRINTS OUT Chattanooga Police Test Blood on Purse.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 4.—(P)—Bloody fingerprints found on Mrs. Eula Mae McConnell's pocketbook that mysteriously appeared in a parked automobile Saturday are too smeared to be of any use, Police Commissioner Eugene S. Bryan announced tonight.

Mrs. McConnell, found beaten and cut in her Vine street apartment home Thursday afternoon, died Friday without telling a coherent story of the attack or identifying the man who tore off most of her clothing and then kicked her in the abdomen.

With the smashing of another clue, Commissioner Bryan said the blood on the pocketbook would be put through an analysis to determine if it was Mrs. McConnell's or that of her slayer.

SPEEDY TRIAL SOUGHT IN SNAKE-DEATH CASE

LOS ANGELES, May 4.—(P)—Prosecutors today drove toward a speedy murder indictment and trial for Robert S. James, barber, accused of drowning his fifth wife after thrusting her into a den of poisonous rattlesnakes.

"I will insist on the death penalty for him," declared District Attorney Byron Fitts. Fitts will go before the grand jury Wednesday to ask a murder indictment against James.

Meanwhile James challenged a "confession" attributed to him by Fitts, declared he had been beaten by police and would plead innocent to any charges in connection with the death of his wife, Mary Busch James.

The members of the executive committee of the association will be guests today of Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the university system and immediate past president of the G. E. A. Professor E. M. Grier, of Athens, president of the association, will honor the group at a dinner Thursday night.

"Outgrown" Glasses Are a Menace to Your Eyes

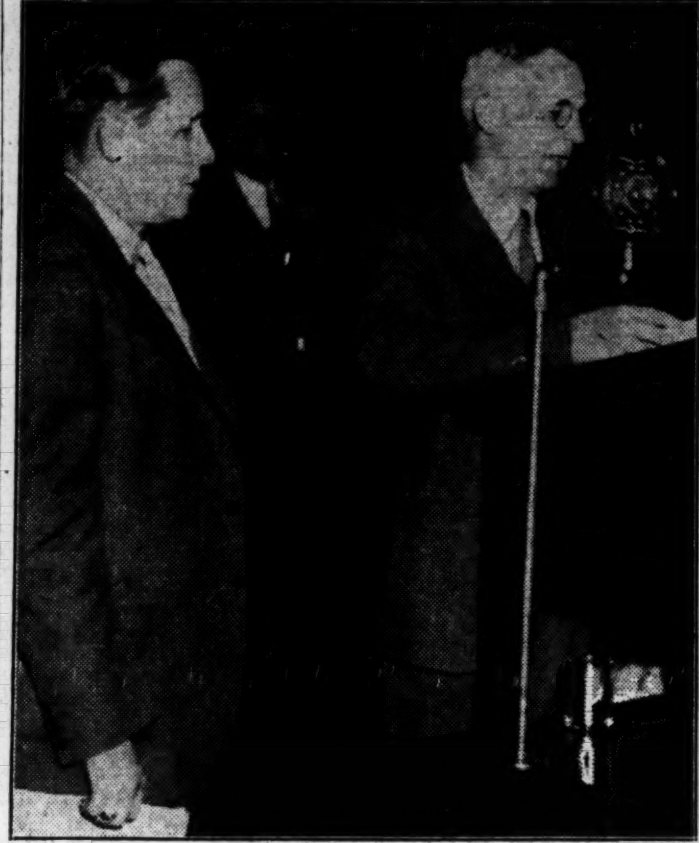

The change is so slight and gradual, one doesn't realize they have outgrown their glasses until headaches, nervousness or some other tell-tale sign makes itself known. Meanwhile, the damage is done. Yet, a regular re-examination by a competent Optometrist would forestall that sort of trouble. Bad habit, neglecting one's eyes!

Deposed Police Committee Head Makes Futile Stand Before Council

Councilman G. Dan Bridges, chairman of the 1936 police committee, is seen at the left above, as Joe L. Richardson, right, city clerk, read a measure offered by Bridges to prevent passage of an ordinance abolishing the police group and designation of a new body to control the department. The Bridges effort was futile.

POLICE BOARD DOOM SEALED BY COUNCIL

Cutcheon and Aldermen John Scott, Hailey and Murphy:

"Be it ordained by the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta, as follows:

"Section 1. The police committee of the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta is hereby abolished.

"Section 2. Be it ordained by the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta that a committee of five members of the general council be named, and the same is hereby created to be known as the committee on public safety, such committee to be appointed by the mayor of the city of Atlanta.

lanta and to be a standing committee of this body.

"Section 3. Be it further ordained that all powers heretofore vested in the police committee of the city of Atlanta by charter or by ordinance are hereby vested in the committee on public safety.

"Section 4. All ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict with this ordinance are hereby repealed.

Amendment Offered. Bridges lost a move to have council take a hands-off policy regarding the entire matter, when he offered a resolution as an amendment to the McCutcheon measure. It was ruled out of order, it being maintained that a resolution could not be offered as an amendment for an ordinance. He attempted to substitute it for the McCutcheon proposal, but council promptly swept that aside.

Alderman Robert Carpenter then attempted to designate four of the five members of the committee by naming the authors of the McCutcheon paper to membership on the newly created public safety committee. That was promptly turned down by council.

In presenting his measure McCutcheon said he had no feeling in the matter.

"I have read in the newspapers that skulking politicians were attempting to make changes," McCutcheon said. "I may be a politician, but I deny that I'm a skulking one. It is necessary that council take some action to correct this situation. I believe this would be a solution of the present discord within the committee."

"Ungodly Mess." Alderman Hailey explained that the reason he joined in presenting the ordinance was the "uncertainty, the middle and the ungodly mess" into which police affairs had degenerated. "I wish the council would name the committee," he asserted. "I know the mayor will select a committee to carry out his policies, and I don't agree with his policies. I don't think we can do any better than this in the circumstances, and I challenge you to do something and pass this paper."

Key sat in the council chamber during the preliminary debate over the measure awaiting for the election of the motor transport department of the city, over which he had to preside.

He declined to comment on the proposition of the new committee, and had nothing to say during the debate.

The McCutcheon measure was offered, and imperfections were pointed out. It was withdrawn to correct them. Key held the election, and Jett was selected for a new four-year term, while the McCutcheon ordinance was being redrawn by City Attorney Jack C. Savage.

Key Goes To Ball Game. After the election was over, Key said:

"Gentlemen, are there any more elections? If not I'll ask you to excuse me. I want to go to the baseball game while your argument goes on."

He then smiled and left the rostrum, turning the gavel back to Mayor Pro Tem. Ellis B. Barrett. Council previously had refused to take any action on Key's communication revoking the appointment of the five original members of the police committee. Any vote was balked when Barrett ruled it out of order on the grounds that it was an illegal procedure.

Although Key declined to comment on the probable membership of the new committee he will select to direct police affairs, there was considerable speculation in city hall circles.

Councilman John A. White or Councilman George B. Lyle were being mentioned as probable choices for the chairmanship. Others in the long list of possibilities included: Councilmen McCutcheon, C. W. Heister, third ward; Raleigh Drennon, ninth; William G. Hastings, sixth; John M. Owen, sixth; W. T. Knight, fifth; M. C. (Mac) Bolen, tenth; Alvin L. Richardson, eighth; M. Rantlin, members of the original 1936 police committee, who along with Alderman William H. Joyner, also mentioned, gave their resignations voluntarily to Key and Alderman J. C. (Mott) Aldredge.

Bridges Was Holdover. Key retained Bridges and Richardson as the only holdover members of the police committee for 1936. He ousted Alderman Farris A. Mitchell and Councilmen Howard Haire and George B. Lyle, when he made his new appointments on the night of January 6, when council was reorganized.

In making the switches, Key said he had picked the best committee possible from the group of members sent to council.

Councilman J. Allen Couch, with whom Bridges has had frequent clashes and who never spoke a word about the council ordinance at the council meeting yesterday when the police committee was abolished; Alderman Joyner and Councilman Rantlin were designated to succeed the three ousted members.

When the Bridges-Couch row broke out, Key attempted to compose the committee schism, but was unsuccessful. He then announced the revocation of the appointments he had made for 1936 and asked council to concur. Even then he was determined to name a new committee in the face of an adverse opinion of the city attorney as to his legal right to oust the original appointees.

Council's action yesterday paved the way for designation of a new group, and Savage maintains that the action is regular and legal.

Record in Trials. A review of the manner in which policemen charged with being intoxicated or drinking were disciplined by the committee under Bridges' chairmanship for the past four years shows that in 1933 nine faced the committee. Three were discharged and the six others were given suspensions ranging from nine days to 90 days.

In 1934, 18 were hailed before the committee. An even dozen were discharged and the remaining others given sentences ranging from excommunication to 30 days.

Sixteen were tried in 1935. Seven were dismissed and the 11 others either freed or given suspensions.

So far this year there have been before the original committee. Two were fired, one found not guilty and two were suspended for 29 days.

"Do not hesitate to believe that he desires union of this church with all churches which bear his name, this (proposal) is not the end of union—Cuthall, of Lincoln, Neb., chancellor of Nebraska Wesleyan University, joined Bishop McDowell in a plea for unification of all Protestant churches.

"It is not a mere matter of church union," he said. "All churches must organize into one body to meet the encroachments of the pagan states. This is but our first step."

Thirty-three of the 52 negro delegates to the conference protested against division of the United Methodist church into five geographical jurisdictions and a sixth for negro churches.

Democratic primaries there also will find the names of President Roosevelt, Upton Sinclair of the EPIC organization, and Representative McGroarty, Townsend plan advocate, listed on the ballot. Both of the latter have said they would throw their support to Mr. Roosevelt on the second ballot at the democratic national convention.

A republican primary in South Dakota today will see Landon forces opposing those of Senator Borah, republican, Idaho. In Alabama, also voting today, President Roosevelt's name was the only one entered.

At Chicago, former Senator Otis F. Glenn announced he would put the name of Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, before the republican convention at Cleveland next month.

CLEAR AND WARM DAY FORECAST FOR ATLANTA

Clear weather will continue in Atlanta today, according to the weather forecasters, with temperatures repeating yesterday's warm work. The mercury is expected to start at 54 degrees this morning and rise to about 80 degrees during the afternoon. Yesterday the temperatures rose from 53 degrees in the morning to 75 in the afternoon.

THIRD WARD CITIZENS FLAY KEY, STURDIVANT

Neighbors and Friends of Bridges Form Permanent 'Law and Order' Body.

Mayor Key and Police Chief T. O. Sturdivant were condemned vigorously and Councilman G. Dan Bridges, chairman of the defunct 1936 police committee, was praised last night as third ward citizens met to form a permanent organization "for law and order and Dan Bridges."

About 20 persons attended the gathering at the home of T. R. Stephenson, 680 Grant street, and virtually all praised Bridges for his courage and his fight "to raise the standard of the police department." Bridges represents the third ward in council.

Another meeting will be held at 8 o'clock next Tuesday night at the home of G. O. White, 600 Grant street. M. C. Cohen was elected permanent chairman of the group and F. H. Hardesty, permanent secretary.

"Protect Friend, Neighbor," "I suggest that we adopt resolutions and let the world know we are behind Bridges and are for law and order," Stephenson said. "The laws should be enforced or they should be repealed. We are down here to protect our friend and neighbor, Dan Bridges, and let council know we don't appreciate the way he has been treated."

"This bunch of men and women condemn the stand of the mayor and the chief of police taken in the police matter," Cohen asserted. "We would like for people all over the city, who feel as we do, to join us. I have known Dan Bridges and have dealt with him for 18 years. He is honest and fair."

"We should do something here and be ready to fight when the time comes to go to the ballot box," White asserted. "The good book says 'Blessed is the man who will swear to his own hurt.' That's the kind of men we want, and that's the kind of a man Bridges is. He is 100 per cent a man."

"Department in Mess." "The police department is in a mess," H. H. Smith told those assembled. "Dan Bridges is right about this matter."

"We stand for right, and I believe Bridges does too," H. H. Duncan said.

"The third ward is for Dan Bridges," F. M. Dingy declared.

"We are lined up for good people and for the good of the city," Mrs. White added. "Mr. Bridges is on the side of good people. He's going through Gethsemane."

The following resolution was passed:

"Be it resolved, that we heartily endorse the stand that G. Dan Bridges has taken as chairman of the police committee and commend his good work."

At the same time, we deplore the lack of co-operation shown by our mayor and chief of police and hereby register our keen disappointment in their failure to properly support Mr. Bridges in his efforts to keep the police department up to a high standard."

A. M. E. CONFERENCE TO MEET IN NEW YORK

A large group of ministers and delegates left Atlanta yesterday for New York to attend the 50th session of the general conference of the A. M. E. church, which opens Wednesday.

Sessions will be held in Rockland Palace, one of the largest negro churches in New York.

This conference will assemble one of the largest crowds of religious workers in the history of the A. M. E. conference, representatives being present from all sections of the world.

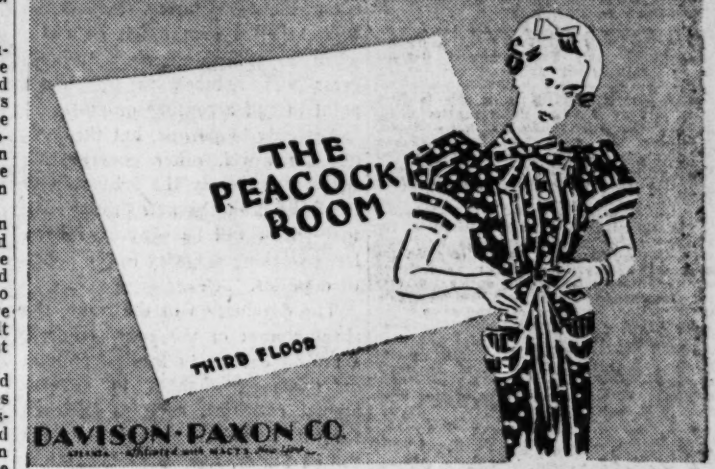

More than 1,000 delegates will be present. Bishop W. A. Fountain, of the Georgia diocese, will deliver the quadrennial address. Among the questions to come before the conference will be the request of some of the foreign delegates that their countries be given native bishops, on the claim that this would aid in the conversion of the natives.

A large number of delegates from Georgia are expected to attend the session.

THE ETHIOPIAN COLLAPSE

While the collapse of the Ethiopian defense before the steady advance of the Romans presages the early end of the military phase of Mussolini's African campaign, it does not mean that Ethiopia will be removed as a danger spot in European affairs.

Instead, it brings to a head the question of just what Mussolini means to do with his newly conquered territory and how his plans will be received by Great Britain and France—particularly the former.

Within 24 hours after the collapse of the Ethiopian defense, the French and British governments began conferring on the question of the "zones of influence" to be accorded to them in the new alignment in the area that now loses its independence as the result of the fortunes of war.

Since the Italians waged their war of conquest in face of the opposition of both France and Great Britain, and the sanctions placed by the League of Nations, it is not likely that Mussolini will be inclined to parcel out the expensively won territory. He may, for diplomatic reasons, be willing to make some concessions, but they will be slight. He has announced for home consumption that he will hold all for Italy.

The European reaction to the complete victory of Italian arms is expressed by the influential Paris Le Temps in the statement that "while the Ethiopian question is ended from a military standpoint, it still remains a difficult problem in the diplomatic field because of the position taken by the League and the members bound by the League compact."

That is France's chief concern, but with Great Britain there is the added worry over the threat of Italian control of the headwaters of the Blue Nile and a strengthened base on the Red Sea.

What sympathy the world has felt for the Ethiopians in their hopeless struggle against the crushing blows of the Italian invaders will be largely counteracted by the outbreak of barbarous savagery staged in Addis Ababa by the Ethiopian tribesmen.

Today their capital city is a mass of smoldering ruins, its streets filled with dead and mutilated bodies, and even their governmental buildings sacked and looted.

The Ethiopians are paying a heavy price for their backwardness, but, after all, it means that the civilization which they have persistently refused to accept will be thrust upon them, and that under the guidance of the Italians they will adopt modern methods and join the march of progress toward peace and prosperity.

THE ANNUAL HORSE SHOW

The seventh annual spring horse show of the Atlanta Horse Show Association, sponsored by the Young Matrons' Circle of the Tallulah Falls Industrial School, will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday and promises to eclipse in brilliance any of the shows that have been given in past years.

Not only does this show give horse lovers opportunity to see equine beauties in dress parade, but as a benefit to the Tallulah Falls Industrial School it extends aid to a noble institution dedicated to the education of the mountain boys and girls of Georgia.

This school was founded 26 years ago, with 21 little bare-legged boys and girls as its students. Today it is a fine institution with 11 grades, 300 students and 14 units.

In its more than a quarter of a century of existence the Tallulah Falls Industrial School has brought new hope and opportunity to hundreds of north Georgia families. Called "The Light in the Mountains," the school has in fact brought the light of education to many fine mountain folk of Georgia who would otherwise have been denied the privilege of obtaining the advantages received by attendance at this school.

That light can be made to burn the brighter by liberal patronage of the horse show, a large per cent of the receipts going to broadening and extending the work of the Tallulah Falls school.

This is a fine opportunity in which to combine keen enjoyment with the opportunity of aiding a splendid institution.

FRANCE'S INTERNAL CRISIS.

The victory of the leftists in the French election for a new chamber of deputies is almost as overwhelming as the democratic victory in the United States in the fall of 1932, when republican strength in congress was reduced to its lowest point in half a century or more.

Not only in Europe, but throughout the world, other governments will watch closely the formation of the policies of the new French cabinet which will be supported by a large working majority in the house of deputies.

The devaluation of the franc, the abandonment of the gold standard, a radical change in foreign policies or sweeping changes in governmental activities, such as followed the democratic victory in the United States, would directly affect every other major nation in the world.

The unprecedented increase in strength by the French leftists is explained by George Berkalew, well-known commentator on international affairs, in an article in the Magazine of Wall Street, on the ground that "the French are facing facts, the stark facts of impending financial collapse, of internal factional strife, of the external peril of an unfathomable Germany, and an equally unfathomable England."

This writer continues:

Momentarily France grapples with a mass of inconsistent realities. The desire to maintain the value of the franc—to effect a rise in prices—to produce a revaluation of agricultural products, to reduce the cost of living index, to increase government expenditure, to lower interest rates, to check treasury short-term borrowing, and to establish a permanent institution for state employee pensions.

Berkalew feels that conditions in France now present a close resemblance to those at the turn of the 18th century, with the same crisis of underconsumption of manufactured products, the same complaints of the peasants regarding the prices of wheat, wine, beef and butter, and with the same dwindling of purchasing power and increase in unemployment.

With such conditions existing among the excitable French people, the appearance of a leader such as Mussolini or Hitler would find the ground fallow for a dictatorship.

Since there is no compelling leader now in the public life of the country, and apparently none in the making, the far swing to the radical left has been the method adopted by the people to express their discontent with existing conditions.

IF MEASURED THE OTHER WAY

If there were a law to permit a political party to be sued on account of desertion or non-support, our good opponents, the democrats, would be obliged to purchase barrels, as it would take their clothing and other possessions to pay these court bills.—Representative Thurston, republican, Iowa.

The Iowa representative is referring, of course, to the number of democrats who have deserted the party in opposition to New Deal policies. According to the latest poll of America Speaks, this number must be small. After Al Smith's speech in Washington, Roosevelt's popularity in New York state went up 1 per cent. The same thing happened in Georgia following Governor Talmadge's "grass roots" convention. It is purely an academic question, but under the premises named by Representative Thurston, what would have happened to the republican party after the presidential election in 1932?

They think flood control will be put over until another congress. In the meantime, Noah and the livestock will please stand by.

A cry is raised that Japanese oysters are flooding our market. We trust the patriot will keep in mind that there is no "I" in Japan.

Death-Ray

A Bluff.

The much-discussed "death ray" capable of bringing enemy airplanes crashing to earth, of halting the onrush of tanks and even of wiping out an attacking army in a flash was denounced as one of the biggest hoaxes of modern times by Professor Paul Langevin, faculty member of the College of France and member of the Institute. Professor Langevin termed the so-called death ray "a bluff" or better still, a fraud. Interviewed by a reporter of "L'Ouvre," the professor declared: "It would be necessary that these rays have tremendous power and that it be possible to concentrate them. But that cannot be done unless you get down to very short waves whose laws of propagation are similar to those of light waves. In that case, however, the frequencies involved become an obstacle to increasing their power. Also, like wireless rays, death rays could only act if they were a receiving apparatus. It would be easy, moreover, to protect motors by providing them with a power covering."

Questioned about the tests of Grin-Mathews, in England and Italy, Professor Langevin said: "After having invented his death ray, he decided to carry on official experiments in exploding submarine mines from a distance. As a matter of fact, he succeeded by means of light rays directed on these devices. The clever trickery was only discovered after the mine's detonator had simply been connected with a photo-electric battery and as soon as a ray of light fell on it the system was put in action. It was well thought out, but there was nothing new in it."

The Oath

Of Verdun.

Five thousand ex-soldiers made a pilgrimage to Verdun and swore the following oath:

Before these countless lines of crosses,
Before the charnel house of Douaumont, where there lie the remains of tens of thousands of men,
Before this field of carnage, where there fell 200,000 French and German soldiers, we bend in sorrow.

There has been enough ruin, enough suffering, enough grief!
We swear together to do everything in our power to bring peace to the world, and we address a supreme appeal to all the victims of the war, to all peoples, to assure with us the individual peace in the fraternal union of a liberated humanity."

A Generous

Parliament.

The bill before the British parliament to prohibit advertisements for quack medicines was "talked out," but there was a time when parliament actually voted public money for a quack remedy. In 1839 Mrs. Joanna Stephens informed the public that she had discovered a certain infallible cure which she proposed to make public for 5,000 pounds to be raised by voluntary subscription. As the public subscribed a mere quarter of that sum, the worthy lady had her offer brought before parliament and an act was passed "for providing for Joanna Stephens upon a proper discovery to be made by her, for the use of the public, of the medicines prepared by the cure of the stone."

For the 5,000 pounds voted Mrs. Stephens revealed the secret of the three medicines—a powder, a decoction and a pill. The powder was compounded of calcined eggshells and snails; the decoction was made by boiling herbs, soap and honey in water; and the pills consisted of calomel, sugar, and a few drops of dock seeds, hips and haws, burnt to blackness and mixed with soap and honey.

Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

SELF PITY.

Do you indulge yourself in that subtle and damaging mental exercise which for lack of a better term is called self pity? It is being sorry for yourself, pampering yourself, making excuses for yourself to yourself and to others—finally believing that you have the hardest time of anybody in the world. I know of no one mental habit more harmful than this business of self pity.

Sacred and secular literature abounds in illustrations of self-pitying folks, and many of them are very charming. One thinks of the example of Elijah, a majestic prophet of God who triumphed over the prophets of Baal at Carmel and within a fortnight was panting like a hounded beast in the field under the juniper bush in the desert 100 miles away whence he had fled. "Let me die, I am no better than my fathers," said this nervous, hungry, and weary man.

Yesterday he was talking and acting like a man, today he is whimpering like a child. Yesterday he could contend with a colony of strong men, today he is afraid of one woman. Why? He got to pitying himself, thinking of his weakness and forgetting God's strength. He was whipped yesterday by a colony of strong men, today he is afraid of one woman. I have never known a man or a woman who could do very much when they crawled up under some juniper bush of self pity. It strips us of faith and hope and courage.

God was very patient with Elijah. He spoke through the angel, telling him to turn over and take a nap, and when he had done so, the angel awoke him and told him to eat some bread which the angel baked on the coals, and then he told him to take another nap, and then he awoke him and told him to go on his journey. The Lord told him to quit pitying himself and playing the Lord and get up and go to work. I have 7,000 faithful friends who have not bowed the knee to Baal," said the Lord. "You are not the only faithful person in the world." Indeed, one seems to understand that the Lord was trying to get Elijah to see that he was quite unfaithful in that self-pitying mood—to get up and go back to work and forget himself in something really worthwhile for others. That is the antidote for self pity.

Marine Safety.

Alfred Guthrie was born in Sherburne, N. Y., in 1805, son of the discoverer of chloroform. Alfred's own great contribution to humanity was his successful, one-man campaign for United States steamboat inspection laws. Before they were passed, 45 per cent of river steamboats were lost by disaster. Afterward only one person in 2,000,000 travelers by the steamboats lost his life in an accident. Now the inspection extends to ocean liners and the mortality rate is even lower.

Oil "Patented."

Oil was "patented" in 1855. Dr. Abraham Gesner was given the exclusive right to manufacture an illuminating fluid which he named kerosene, derived from bituminous shale and canal coal. This was four years before the first commercial oil well was drilled at Titusville, Pa.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

CREDIT

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Sometimes the governmental publicity system falls down on the job. For instance, here is Currency Controller O'Connor. He has just perfected a new promotional scheme for disposing of the assets of closed banks. Not only that but his scheme may disclose what is wrong with the whole banking business. Yet in any announcement has been made concerning it.

Basically, the new O'Connor plan applies advanced Huey Long theories to banking for the first time. It employs the sound truck technique. The comptroller first conceived last fall the idea of sending these ballyhoo tallies around the country advertising his rummage sales of bank assets. It worked so well at Gulfport, Miss., that he tried it again lately at St. Petersburg and Miami. Now it has become a settled practice.

Giving credit where credit is due, Mr. O'Connor's friends say his success has been stupendous, if not colossal. At St. Petersburg, his medicine show took in $75,000 and, at Miami, $46,000, which are box office records for those two towns.

DISCOURAGEMENT. Mr. O'Connor's Gulfport sound truck traveled 1,800 miles advertising the assets of the closed Gulfport bank. Presumably it went as far as St. Petersburg and Miami as the anti-noise laws of Florida permit. It was augmented by continuous radio announcements, an auto sticker campaign, thousands of form letters and signs painted six feet high.

As Mr. O'Connor's friends point out, his success shows that what is wrong with the banking business is that it is not fire-sale-minded.

Mr. O'Connor is, however, running into the same lack of appreciation suffered by all leaders with too advanced ideas. One banker, when asked what he thought about the scheme, replied: "I fully expect to hear next that the Treasury has purchased a herd of monkeys and employed an army of organ grinders."

DECENTRALIZING. The State Department did not similarly fall down on its publicity job in announcing the ratification of the Canadian Treaty.

Thirty-three sheets of paper, half the usual typewriter size, were given out, folded in the general announcement. Each sheet contained a separate benefit of the treaty. The first was headed: "Cotton Goods" and recited what cotton products would be benefited. Other half-sheets were labeled "Glass," "Petroleum," "Aircraft," "Machinery," etc. No two products were on the same sheet.

Newsmen received a little note from the department which read as follows:

"The attached material on concessions obtained from Canada that are of interest to your state, has been prepared in accessible form for your convenience. Similar data as to the interests of each other state will be furnished on request."

In other words, each correspondent was informed of the benefits to his own locality, but not of the benefits to others. Thus it appears that even the State Department is decentralizing its international relations into local appeals in accordance with the new decentralization publicity scheme which has been adopted by other government departments.

HOODWINKING. The appointment of Herman Goering as economic dictator of Germany over Hjalmar Schacht is generally supposed on this side of the Atlantic to mean that Dr. Schacht is on his way out. On the contrary, it represents a victory for him.

The fight between Schacht and the radical nazis has been bitter. He opposed Jewish persecutions, political murders and the Rhineland occupation on the wholly practical ground that they hurt Germany's foreign credit. Hitler's extremists in the cabinet have been trying to get him out for a long time, but economic brains are not plentiful in the upper crust of nazism, and Hitler could not afford to lose Schacht. He could not go on warring his time fighting the radical nazis and would resign. Hitler persuaded him to stay with the promise that he would try to curb the radical elements.

The Goering appointment does it. Goering, as economic dictator, will sign the decrees, but in reality Schacht will draw them up. The nazi radicals who felt free to fight Schacht will not dare to oppose Goering.

It is a good idea, but our officials doubt that it will work. They fully expect trouble between Goering and Schacht.

GROUPING

Among the 218 names on the Frazier-Lemke petition are:

Three dead men: The late Representatives Trux, Buckee and Lloyd. One who is retiring from congress: Mrs. Greenway.

Three who are not returning because they are candidates for the senate: Representatives Monaghan, Lee and Utterback.

Representative Hoepfel, who was convicted on a charge of selling a West Point appointment.

Representative Zioncheck, who is conducting a sensational campaign toward retirement.

The mark of shoes upon the stair,
A chipped molasses jug.

Fingerprints upon the wall

Forgotten playthings in the hall,

A worn old brush and comb—

Take Me

Over to, etc., etc.

Several thousand other Atlantans had the same idea. We all went to the ball game, Sunday afternoon.

Sat, more or less patiently, waiting for the skies to decide whether or not they would hold back the rain long enough for the game to be played. Skies were merciful and at last the game began. Nine innings. For details and result, please see sports page.

Woman behind me trying to keep score. Not much experience and it required much explanation and correction from her companion. Lack of knowledge on the part of the girl explained by overheard remark:

"You know, this is the first time I've ever seen Buster Chatham." Lady, just keep your mouth shut and stay away from ball games.

Cortes' Expedition.

Spanish led by Hernando Cortes, 34, captured Tenochtitlan, the southern extremity of Mexico in 1519, and began his conquest of the country. From Mexico they spread northward into California, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, Louisiana, etc., and were responsible for the fact that old world civilization as represented by Christian churches, schools, printing shops, etc., were thriving in those sections before any English colony was established in America.

A republic was flourishing in America when Cortes arrived, and he would not have succeeded in his conquest without its aid. The republic of Cortes was frequently attacked by the Aztec empire of Montezuma, and the assistance of vengeful Tlaxcalans gave the European invaders the decisive part in the campaign of Cortes, a handful of men against the thousands of Aztecs.

Fire-Fighters.

The first professional fire-fighters in the United States took up their duties in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1853. They were members of the first paid municipal fire department to be organized. Previously Cincinnati, like every other town in the country, had only volunteer fire-fighters, usually unorganized.

To a Child.

A little girl sitting in church, watching a wedding, suddenly exclaimed: "Mummy, has the lady changed her mind?"

"What do you mean?" the mother asked.

"Why," replied the child, "she went up the aisle with one man and came back with another."

Geese in Alsace

The City of Strasbourg.

Westbrook Pegler is on vacation and his "Fair Enough" will not appear in this page during the next few days.

STRASBOURG, France, May 4.—However foolish a goose may appear outside Alsace, in this city the bird is at once the symbol of prosperity and fame. China models of geese stand in half the store windows, and tourists who want to buy tropical souvenirs of the city for their friends are likely to ignore the elaborate photographs of the great cathedral, in order to purchase small geese made of gold, silver or enamel.

Strasbourg is the greatest center of the goose-liver industry in the world, the industry which has put pate de foies gras into the dictionary. Here a jar of pate is comparatively cheap, but elsewhere it will bring four times the local price, often more.

The geese for it are artificially stuffed with food, so that their livers become enlarged and the birds get too fat to walk. And what a delicacy those livers make! When pate de foies gras appears on restaurant tables garnished with truffles, or is packed in fancy jars for delicatessen stores all over the world, caviar meets its greatest rival for extracting high prices from true epicures.

"Gentlemen From Mayence." Strasbourg is a place known by its equally famous association with the geese that laid its golden egg. Five hundred years ago a gentleman from Mayence came to Strasbourg to live and experiment with movable printing types. His name, translated into English, was John Gosemeier, of Gutenberg. His presence in the city, where he lived for 25 years, must have been remembered more at first on account of his name than for anything he had done. The accident of his name, however, was soon forgotten, and history has immortalized him as John Gutenberg.

The site where he made his first printing experiments, just east of the cathedral, is proudly pointed out. Mainz honors him as its citizen, but Strasbourg glorifies in the great work he began in its midst.

"La Marsellaise." However much the goose plays a part in the history of Strasbourg, Americans who come to the city this year will think rather of Rouget de Lisle and ask to see the place where he wrote the "Chant of Departure of the Army of the Rhine," later called "La Marsellaise." All France will celebrate in 1936 the hundredth anniversary of his death on June 27, while France from all over the world is expected to pay tribute to him before the old mayor's house at 2 Place Broglie, where he first sang that immortal song.

It is not too much to say that Americans who come to Alsace find the charm of its old houses and its food enough reason for staying longer than needed just to see a few famous places. Painted gables, half-timbered walls, towers of the middle ages and chimney-pots crowned with nests of birds give the whole town an appearance of dreamlike unreality. It is but a few hours by motor or train from Paris, and is one of the most delightful regions of France, where both French and Germans agree that the geese and the grape are excellent.

Talmudic Tales

BY DAVID MORANTZ.

He ordered the man to come before him and state his mission, to which the spokesman of the group replied: "We are three merchants, who wish to leave with these 10,000 gold pieces to distribute among the poor and needy of the city. For instance, 'What is the reason for such generosity?' asked Solomon.

"Our ship," replied the man, "loaded with valuable goods on our way to the land struck a leak and we were unable to find anything that would fit into the hole and stop the leak. Fearing that it would sink before we reached port, we vowed that if we were permitted to reach land safely with our cargo, we would give away a tenth of the value of our goods to the poor. Suddenly this bag of flour was blown into the hole and stopped the leak. This enabled us to reach shore safely with our goods."

"Fulfilling our vow, we bring to you these 10,000 gold pieces, which are the part of the value of our cargo and likewise the bag of flour that saved our ship from sinking. Turning to the poor woman the king said:

"What think you of this?" "Indeed, your majesty," she exclaimed. "That is the sack of flour I was carrying when the wind blew it from my hand. I have it now. I am the poor woman who was told to work just seven months out of the year and spend the rest of the time relaxing from the strain. Strain—shucks! Maybe my three pictures haven't initiated me right or something, but I'm still wondering who that was who said pictures were hard work. Never had so much time for gain in my life."

Anyhow, last week I told that agent of mine to get himself out and fill up the other five months with some more of this work. Can't be just sitting round here all that time with nothing to relax from," I said. "Might as well be in there, learning some new tunes." And gosh-danged if he didn't sign me up for the day on a five-year contract. "But wait," I say. "It's a funny thing. Here's an old fellow who wants to work—and the first thing the studio suggests I do, under that new contract, is to get out and play some golf, give myself a little vacation before we start shooting."

Spending Money Means Nothing to a King Who Has Everything He Wants

Bill Jones was poor all his life. In spite of hard work and commendable thrift, and his resentment increased every year. On his thirty-fifth birthday he went to the king and said: "Look here, King; I'm tired of poverty, and I want to be a millionaire." "A modest wish," smiled the king. "However, you must understand that some millionaires work very hard."

ITALIAN FORCES READY TO ENTER ADDIS ABABA

staged legations in the Ethiopian capital.

Earlier, Premier Mussolini intimated to the nation the long-awaited hour for a victory celebration was at hand.

He announced to a wildly cheering chamber of deputies he had ordered a national mass meeting similar to that which signified the opening of East African hostilities October 2. It may be held tomorrow, since the vanguard of the Italian troops was reported just outside Addis Ababa.

Lantern-jawed Count Constantino Ciano, president of the chamber, had just set the keynote of the meeting with the assertion:

"No human force, no coalition can snatch away the fruit of this triumph."

Deputies, whose office Mussolini has already announced will soon be abolished, stood and shouted tumultuously. It seemed that the Italian troops were on the march, but it was only a ruse to draw the attention of the press.

At Capital Gates.

Dispatches from the northern front indicated the Italians were in a position to enter Addis Ababa.

TIRED and PEPPLESS

No wonder so many of us get up in the morning feeling as tired as when we went to bed—no wonder the world looks blue. If your stomach is full of a thing like this, rancid vinegar, your food doesn't do you much good. You get what comes from a sour fermenting mass. You can't help but lose strength, get nervous and feel exhausted all the time. If this acid gets into the bowels, it upsets their action and you get constipated. Then toxic poisons get into the blood and start a lot of things like headaches, rheumatic pains, bad skin, etc. Don't take salts or purgatives to clean out this sourness—they flush out vital body fluids and leave your system dry and irritable without helping the cause. Try Placidan, the new medical discovery with the double action. Placidan corrects excessive acidity without disturbing the stomach juices. It forms a soothing coating over raw irritated membranes and helps stop the making of more burning acid. You get RELIEF at once from gas and acid indigestion. Take Placidan regularly for a short time and you'll soon rejoice at the astonishing return of vigor. Ask for the new liberal size 25c package of Placidan at any drug store.

Bandit Shooting Is Music For Reporter's Wedding

ADDIS ABABA, May 4.—(AP) With traditional British nonchalance, a British newspaperman was married today to the accompaniment of bandit shooting.

G. L. Steer, a British citizen and correspondent for the New York Times and London Times, married Margaretta de Harroes, a special correspondent of the Paris newspaper, Le Journal.

The ceremony was performed within the British legation while Sikh soldiers stood guard against mobs in the capital.

tion to enter Ethiopia's riot-torn capital at will.

British troops under General Pirajio Birosi camped on hills dominating the city, where they could observe columns of smoke billowing up from fires set by native mobs.

It only remained for Marshal Pietro Badoglio's main motorized column to grind over the less than 75 remaining miles of mud and clogged roads for the victorious armies to enter Addis Ababa in full panoply.

Marshal Badoglio in his daily communique reporting yesterday's movements said:

"Our motorized column passed beyond Tenaber and occupied Debra Birhan, the former capital of Digo (75 miles from Addis Ababa)."

"Our advance guard are 40 kilometers (25 miles) beyond Debra Birhan. (This advance guard is preceded by native infantrymen, believed to be the victors of the battle.)"

On Southern Front.

"On the southern front our advance continued despite very heavy rains. Our troops have reached a point 80 kilometers (50 miles) beyond Daga Bur and have beaten and dispersed the warriors of Omar Samantar, responsible for the murder of Captain Carolei (an Italian officer) in 1925 and who later enrolled as a chief in the army of Emperor Haile Selassie. In the fight, Omar Samantar was seriously wounded and his son, named Erzi, was killed with 30 other warriors."

The Ogaden population is receiving the liberating Italians joyously.

"The air corps is extremely active along the entire front."

In the royal gallery of the chamber today was Queen Giovanna, of Bulgaria. Alexander Kirk, American charge d'affaires, was in the diplomatic gallery.

The national mass meeting will be broadcast in four languages.

"whether the emperor had abdicated or not and who now represents the Ethiopian government in the country."

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Eden, meeting a deputation from the League of Nations union, emphasized Great Britain will have to take action of the League's position in the light of the apparent failure of collective action in this dispute.

The question of reform of the covenant, they said, "would need very careful consideration."

The deputation said unless Italy is prevented by economic pressure "from enjoying the fruits of her unjust victory" it was doubtful whether the British people would be ready to come to the assistance of other League members who might be victims of aggression.

ITALIANS ANGERED BY NEWS OF TREATMENT

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

ROME, May 4.—(UP)—The East African war tonight brought Italy nearer the threat of hostilities in Europe than at any time since the invasion of Ethiopia began last October and the British home fleet steamed grimly into the Mediterranean.

Officials here have not sought to hide their resentment over French and British attitudes since Emperor Haile Selassie abandoned his capital at Addis Ababa Saturday.

Three events particularly have aroused Italian ire:

1. French action in receiving the news in French Somaliland and quartering him and his family in the governor's palace as guests of France.

2. British action in granting the imperial refugees asylum in Palestine and providing the cruiser Enterprise to take them to the Red Sea.

3. The British ultimatum to Italy, which demanded that Italy withdraw from Ethiopia and accept the League's position in the light of the apparent failure of collective action in this dispute.

Where Americans Are Besieged by Ethiopian Natives

Hopkins Challenges WPA Critics To Debate Issue of Jobs Vs. Dole

WASHINGTON, May 4.—(UP)—

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins today challenged administration critics to debate this work-relief issue in the presidential campaign.

"Shall we continue the New Deal job program, or have a wasteful and outrageous dole?"

With Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at his side, the former New York social worker who has spent more than $7,000,000,000 providing for the nation's needy, definitely committed the New Deal to continuation of present relief policies.

"The one issue is whether the jobs should be given work for relief, or a basket of groceries every Monday morning," Hopkins said in opening a three-day conference of WPA's division of women's and professional project directors.

"Vote hear critics tell how they would give relief back to the states, but no one talks about the real issue—work against the dole. I'd like to see the states try to do it, with the people the judge."

People without jobs are that way through no fault of their own," Hopkins said. "There is work to be done. It would be wasteful to the country and outrageous to the needy to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars and get nothing in return."

Mrs. Roosevelt nodded approvingly, then herself urged the conference delegates "to educate opponents of the work program in your community to the value of our projects."

"People who have something," she said, "should see what happens when that something is taken away."

Hopkins did not name the "administration critics." He did not answer G. O. P. attacks against his spending.

His only partisan reference was a jab about "five little kittens who were born republican but became democrats as soon as their eyes were opened."

Hopkins made it plain, however, that the New Deal would present its current $4,000,000,000 job program to voters as part of the administration answer to this question: "Shall the New Deal be continued by law and in cooperation with industry, that people in poverty have security and a fair share of the national income?"

"Now, that idea never occurred to me," she said. "If any person feels that way, she must have something on her conscience. She must be at war with her surroundings."

Hopkins did not comment on the attempt of a congressional bloc to earmark $100,000,000 of the proposed new $1,500,000,000 work-relief appropriation for non-federal public works construction.

While he was speaking, David Lasser, Pennsylvania unemployed organizer, appeared before the house labor committee advocating the $8,000,000,000 job bill introduced by Representative Vito Marcantonio, democrat, New York.

Today from marauding bandits, he sought out the American compound because he had known Cramp. Under his robe he wore the formidable sub-machine gun, a welcome addition to the inadequate arsenal possessed by the defenders.

Engert reported, apparently jubilant, that the department had been hit by a message to the British legation—only four miles distant from his own mission—in asking the assistance of British soldiers and guns.

From London, word was flashed within a matter of hours to give the American legation the aid sought.

Engert took this roundabout means of communicating with his colleague, the British minister, Sir Sidney Barton, because he was unable to get to the British compound through the riot-torn streets.

All telephone service has been cut off, and the only means of communication have been the only means of outside communication.

In the legation with Engert were his staff, two native servants of the four American navy radio operators, who provide the only direct communication with the United States; and a few white and native employees.

Beat Off Attack.

Armed only with rifles, shotguns and pistols, his staff beat off a surprise attack by Ethiopian bandits early this morning, killing, or wounding, at least one but themselves escaping serious injury.

Bullets fired from ambush narrowly missed Mrs. Engert and John Spencer, of Grinnell, Iowa, American adviser to the Ethiopian government, who were in the backyard of the legation when the attackers opened heavy rifle fire on the rear gates.

Some of the Americans were doing errands outside the legation at the time and the attack had to be met with a seriously depleted force.

Proudly, however, Engert told the department the world he and his staff had been driven away after a brisk exchange of shots.

"Thanks to the loyalty of our native servants including cooks, who had once rushed to defend gates with only a few revolvers, spears and swords until the rest of us arrived with pistols and shotguns, we made much greater show of numbers than at first expected," Engert wirelessed Washington.

Praises Courage.

Praising the courage of his fellow countrymen under fire he added: "The whole incident proves again that a few armed white men can easily hold their own provided opponents are not in overwhelming numbers."

Even then, however, the American minister was trying to inform the British legation of the latest threat against the Americans because he had been unable to get through previously, with the exception of Mrs. Engert, all women and children had been removed to the greater safety of the well-fortified British compound.

Among those evacuated were the minister's two children.

Reporting fire still raged in the capital and the random firing of rioting looters was getting worse, he said, he had sent to the British legation could not get through.

"As communication with the legation is essential if we are to remain here," he added, "please communicate immediately via London my request."

Sir Sidney Barton, British minister here, that he get in touch with me.

Wants Few Sikhs.

"Kindly state also that the assistance of a few Sikhs (British Indian troops guarding that legation) and one Lewis gun we could hold this legation if Italians arrive within few days."

"I feel it would be a great pity to be obliged to abandon it and radio to certain destruction after holding it for three days."

In his late message, reporting the situation was getting worse, he said several shots had been fired directly at the legation building and radio station since the morning and two native women in the servants' quarters had been seriously wounded.

Some indication of the gravity with which State Department officials regarded the plight of the legation was seen in the fact it ordered abandonment of the use of the usual diplomatic code in messages exchanged between Washington and Addis Ababa.

They now are being received directly in the international telegraph code but arranged only in plain English in contrast to the system of numbers and letters by which most diplomatic messages are sent.

Fortunate Circumstance.

Engert's request for British assistance was sent some time after a fortunate circumstance had brought to the hands of the Americans a much-needed sub-machine gun.

This was due to the fact that Vice Consul William M. Cramp, of Philadelphia, was a curio collector and had cultivated the acquaintance of a native policeman in pursuit of his hobby.

When this policeman fled to safety, he left behind him a sub-machine gun.

ANNUAL FIELD EVENT SET AT EXPERIMENT

Work Being Done by Branch of University To Be Shown May 15.

EXPERIMENT, Ga., May 4.—(AP) The work now being done by the Georgia experiment station of the state university system in the development of livestock and cereal grains is to be shown here Friday, May 15, at the annual field day.

A special invitation to attend the show has been extended to farmers, county agents, and vocational agriculture teachers and their students by F. E. Stuckey, director of the station.

The livestock program, prepared by F. R. Edwards, animal husbandman, will include a series of demonstrations instead of talks. R. P. Bledsoe, agronomist, is to show newly created varieties of wheat and oats that have been bred for resistance to rust, smut and other diseases.

The home economics department will have a special program for women and homemakers.

As part of the livestock program, 250 head of beef cattle, now on test, will be shown. Eighty head of the county feeding tests and the others on pasture and breeding tests.

The feeding tests are to compare cottonseed meal, peanut meal and velvet feed as protein concentrates.

Other features of the livestock program will be demonstrations with beef cattle of dehorning, screw worm control and other operations; with sheep of shearing, wool grading and marketing, docking and parasite treatment, and of pasture tests and parasite control with swine.

ANTI-TAX CAMPAIGN IS LAID TO PACKERS

gress to scrap the bill and delay imposition of new taxes until "a sound fiscal program for both expenditures and revenues, has been prepared."

In commenting on the meat packers' letter, Harrison warned that the committee would not be able to continue its hearings indefinitely.

(The tax bill would repeal existing corporate taxes and instead tax net income of corporations up to 42-1-2 per cent, depending upon how much was withheld from distribution as dividends. The normal income tax rate of 4 per cent would apply to dividends received by stockholders.)

Four members of the chamber's committee on federal finance appeared to oppose the measure from various angles. Summarizing their view, Ellsworth Alvord, of Washington recommended:

"1. The pending bill be scrapped.

"2. The taxes should not be imposed until after a sound fiscal program, for both expenditures and revenues, has been prepared."

He argued that the 1937 budget could be balanced even by excluding relief.

He contended further that the proposed tax program was "utterly impractical, unworkable and unsound."

Noting Secretary Morgenthau's statement last week that the administration's estimates, the new corporate tax will yield $820,000,000 annually, he said the bill would bring in only $310,000,000 during the next fiscal year.

"Aid to Monopoly."

Alvord listed a score of specific objections to the plan, including the contention that it would "retard the growth of competition, and will tend to aid, if not create, monopoly," and that "the unwary and the poorly advised will suffer terrific penalties, and the well-advised may escape tax free, or with lighter burden."

He argued also that the bill would retard recovery, impair the financial strength of corporations, increase inequities in taxes, and result in duplicate taxation.

Fred H. Clausen, chairman of the chamber's committee, said businessmen accepted the need for a balanced budget, but did not consider the proposed legislation "a means to that end."

He said the bill was "the fourth tax increase and the fifth tax measure applied to business since 1932," and yet this year the government had the "largest revenues, the largest expenditures, and the largest deficit in peace-time history."

Bar to New Business.

Henry B. Fernald, another chamber spokesman, warned the committee the bill would "put a premium on bankruptcy and receiverships" and "make it practically impossible for new business to be started."

Roy C. Osgood, fourth chamber witness, said the bill would "make more difficult the acquiring of capital to finance the establishment of new business enterprises, whether of small or large size."

All the witnesses testified with little or no interruption of the senate committee members, although at one point Alvord was cross-examined on a technical phase of the bill.

MERGER VOTE REQUEST SENT TO COMMITTEE

Council Resolution Calls on Democratic Body To Place Issue on Ballot.

The controversy over the proposed consolidation of overlapping departments of Atlanta and Fulton county may be passed on by voters of Atlanta in the September 2 municipal primary.

City council yesterday ordered a resolution which called on the city democratic executive committee to seek a referendum on the issue, sent to the charter revision committee for study. The measure was presented by Alderman Thomas C. McLaurin, third ward.

If approved and placed on the ballot the electorate would have the privilege of passing on the important issue.

A large group of other proposals submitted by Councilmen John A. White and Howard Haire, members of the joint council-citizens' safety commission, with a view of reducing automobile accidents and thus displacing Atlanta from the unenviable position as one of the leading cities in the nation in the number of fatal accidents were sent to the commission for study at the request of the authors.

Would Eliminate Turn.
The Haire measure would eliminate the right turn on red lights. Among the White proposals referred to the commission were the following:

1. Request that the automobile division of the State Revenue Commission reserve blocks of tags for Fulton and DeKalb county machines in order that local cars may be more easily identified.

2. A move to obtain a state patrol, uniform state traffic laws and a state drivers license law to be dispatched to DeKalb and Fulton representatives in the general assembly.

3. Registration of all motor-driven vehicles with the Atlanta police department and creation of a special traffic court to insure uniform penalties for violators.

4. Establishment of a director of public safety to direct the police department, supplanting the chief of police.

Public Hearing Proposed.
White, who is chairman of the commission, asserted that a public hearing will be called on all the proposed measures within the next few weeks and that those approved by the commission will be taken to the council for sanction of that body.

Among other important actions of council were the following:

1. Referred to the finance committee a demand by Councilman Max M. Cuba, second ward, that the motorcycle traffic law enforcement squad of the police department be increased from 22 to 40 men.

2. Elected R. B. Jett as superintendent of the motor transport division of the city for a new four-year term.

3. Confirmed Mayor Key's appointment of Robert C. Mizell, president of the Georgia Taxpayers' Association, a member of the Atlanta bond commission to succeed Alfred C. Newell, resigned.

4. Heard a report that Emerson Gardner, president of the Atlanta Lawyers' Club, will appoint a committee to work with a special committee to place a suitable memorial to the memory of the late James L. Mayson, city attorney, in the city hall.

Car Inspection Refused.
5. Turned down a proposal by White to allow the Safety Lane Inspection Service, Inc., to set up the machinery in city streets for free testing of machines. White urged approval as a safety measure, but was opposed by Councilman Raleigh Drennon and others and Mayor Pro Tem. Barrett ruled the city could not allow the street to be blocked by private corporations when the point was raised.

6. Adopted resolutions regretting the death of Mrs. Joe H. Brantley, wife of the superintendent of Battle Hill sanitarium, and the illness of Councilman Forrest E. Kibler, fourth ward.

7. Approved the lease of 182 acres of land adjoining the city prison farm with an option to purchase for $16,000.

8. Approved a salary warrant issuance proposal in lieu of the monthly blanket borrowing of money to meet pay rolls for municipal employees. The system is similar to the one used by Fulton county.

9. Passed a resolution by Councilman Drennon providing that where any policeman are cited for offenses before recorders a record of the testimony shall be taken and dispatched to the public safety committee. "This will help refresh the memory of police officers who testify before the court that brother policemen are drunk and then can't remember when the policeman is on trial before the committee."

Smoke Abatement League.
10. Sent to the finance committee a request by Councilman William R. Johnson, chairman of the sanitary committee, for $750 to aid in training members of the National Smoke Abatement League at the annual convention here June 2-5.

11. Awarded contract for construction of the South River bridge plant to the Northeastern Construction Company for $229,650.

12. Approved lease of the Macasphalt Corporation of Georgia's plant for the remainder of the year for $1,000 and its purchase next year for $25,000. The aldermanic board, however, withheld action on the proposal pending further investigation.

13. Made it unlawful to place advertising matter of any nature on or in parked automobiles without the consent of the owner. The measure was offered by Councilman George R. Lyle and provides a penalty of $25 fine or 10 days imprisonment for violation.

The aldermanic board advised a proposal allowing the V. P. Warren Company free use of city water on its amateur athletic field.

GARDNER CALLED BY LOCAL CHURCH

Young Pastor in Virginia Invited to Fill Presbyter-ian Pulpit Here.

Congregation of the First Presbyterian church will extend a call to the Rev. William V. Gardner, of Farmville, Va., to become pastor of the church here, it was announced yesterday. Dr. J. Spore Lyons, pastor of the Atlanta church for 22 years, resigned recently to become pastor emeritus.

A vote on the call was taken Sunday morning following a formal recommendation of Mr. Gardner by the church elders and pulpit committee, which Philip Welton is chairman.

The Virginia pastor preached a trial sermon at the church three weeks ago. If Mr. Gardner accepts the call and is released by the Virginia presbytery, he will be one of the youngest ministers ever to fill such a large pastorate, it was said. He is 32 years old and is a native of Tyn, Miss.

He attended the University of Mississippi before going to Southwestern College, where he received his A. B. degree in 1925.

H received his bachelor of divinity degree from the Union Theological Seminary, at Richmond, in 1928 and the following year accepted a fellowship at the American School of Archaeology, in Jerusalem. In 1930 he received his master's degree in theology at the Union Seminary. His first pastorate was at the Presbyterian church at Tusculum, Ala.

VICTIM OF AUTO CRASH IS IN "FAIR" CONDITION

The condition of Ernest Bowen, 25, of Gainesville, who suffered the loss of his left arm Sunday morning in an automobile accident, was described as "only fair" last night at Emory University hospital.

Bowen was injured when his automobile and a truck "sideswiped" each other on a curve on the Lawrenceville highway, near Tucker. He had been driving with his left arm resting on the car door when the accident occurred.

Roosevelt Dickens, of Nalley, N. C., was reported by DeKalb county police as the driver of the truck. No charges were filed as the accident was reported as unavoidable.

Accused Woman Pleads Attack Was Justified

A home broken up by "another woman" was described yesterday in Fulton superior court by Mrs. Ella Cone, who is on trial charged with assault with intent to murder Mrs. Evelyn Russell, of a Thirteenth street address.

Taking the stand in her own defense, Mrs. Cone told the court she attacked Mrs. Russell and cut her with a knife after she had been "driven crazy" because her husband "went with" Mrs. Russell and refused to support her.

The state charged Mrs. Cone attacked Mrs. Russell several times, tearing her clothing and inflicting bodily injuries. Mrs. Cone wept as she attempted to justify her actions before the jury.

Witnesses for the prosecution testified Mrs. Cone attacked Mrs. Russell on a downtown street once and that over a period of 10 years she had assaulted her at least four times. Mrs. Cone is under a burglary indictment in addition to the assault with intent to murder charge. The state alleges she took Mrs. Russell's dresses and destroyed them.

The trial of Mrs. Cone was recessed late yesterday by Judge G. H. Howard and will be continued this morning.

Politicians Blamed by Fire Chiefs For Parking Evils in Larger Cities

When politicians no longer control the parking rules and regulations of large cities, many problems harassing police and fire departments will be solved, Chief C. M. Johnson, of Knoxville, declared yesterday in an address before the annual convention of the Southeastern Association of Fire Chiefs.

More than 40 chiefs from principal cities in 10 southeastern states are attending the meeting. At the session last night Chief D. W. Brosnan, of Albany, addressed the delegates on the uses of salvage covers, and R. A. Foster, of the Portsmouth navy yards, in Virginia, discussed the importance of fire department sprinkler connections.

Several other addresses and the appointment of committees featured yesterday's sessions.

Chief Johnson said if the control of parking is taken out of the hands of politicians, the danger of parked cars and trucks blocking the work of firemen will be eliminated and parking laws will be more easily enforced.

Knoxville Plan.
"In Knoxville parking is under the control of an emergency officer in the fire department, who is under the safety director by a legislative setup," he pointed out. "Parking regulations are secured through state legislation. Thus, when a street is declared one way or a no-parking zone, the complaint of merchants is of no avail. They have to wait two years before they can go to the legislature, but that time merchants are so well pleased with the regulations they themselves will fight any attempt to change them."

Three major traffic problems cause fire departments to delay in answering alarms, he said. First is moving and parked traffic along the route to the fire; second, curiosity seekers and parked cars at the scene, and third, fire fans who insist upon racing or chasing fire trucks. Chief Johnson urged educational programs and law enforcement as solutions to the problems.

Fire Boats Praised.

The effectiveness of boats in fire-fighting, when they move "unhindered by crowds and congested traffic," was discussed by Chief W. Q. Dowling, of Jacksonville.

"Boats time and again have aided in putting out blazes several blocks from waterfronts," he said. "They can move swiftly and silently, unhindered by crowds and congested traffic. An illustration of their value is in the lower insurance rates for buildings within 1,000 feet of the waterfront in Jacksonville—a substantial saving over rates for the rest of the city."

Other speakers at the afternoon session were Chief V. C. Shepard, of Macon, and Chief Floyd C. Hender, of Winter Haven, Fla. Chief Walter W. Stephens, president, of Anniston, Ala., opened the convention yesterday morning. Carlton Mobley, executive secretary of Governor Talmadge, welcomed the guests. The Rev. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, conducted a service honoring southeastern firemen who last year lost their lives in line of service.

Congratulated by F. D. R.
Chief O. J. Parker yesterday afternoon announced receipt of a letter from President Roosevelt congratulating the Atlanta fire department for winning the 1935 fire prevention award offered by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The convention will close early this afternoon following the election of officers and the selection of next year's convention city. Speakers at the morning session will be Chief I. S. Ingram, of Montgomery, who will discuss the use of hose in firefighting, and L. C. Sledge, engineer, who will have as his subject "Adequate Water, Mains in Municipal Fire Protection."

Most of the chiefs have indicated they will attend the annual Georgia fire college which will be held here for three days beginning tomorrow.

CORPORATION PROFITS ADVANCE 34 PER CENT

Machinery, Oil and Rail Fields Show Sharpest Increase.

NEW YORK, May 4.—(P)—Earnings for the initial quarter this year of the first 282 reporting corporations rose 34.8 per cent over the same period a year ago, a survey by the Associated Press today showed.

Rising incomes predominated, 190 reports revealing improvement over 1935 against 93 declines.

The previously lagged heavy industries scored the largest gains. Earnings of this group suffered most from the impact of the depression and did not begin to climb from the depths until recently. Hence even minor percentage changes.

The consumer goods industries showed a smaller recovery in earnings power but are currently operating much nearer the boom-time peaks. The sharpest pickup occurred in the heavy machinery, oil and rail equipment fields; advances ranging up to 163.5 per cent.

Losses were chalked up by textile manufacturers, coal mining, automobile accessories and utility operating companies.

FLORIDIAN TAKES OWN LIFE.

BURN OIL THE G-E WAY
Safely-Dependably-Economically

THE new G-E Oil Furnace eliminates two big causes of heating waste. First, it burns oil in a new way that "wings out" from every drop the last unit of practicable heat. And second, it "traps" the extra heat which usually escapes up the chimney.

The result? Heating dollars go further—you get the full value out of the oil you burn.

One look through the observation window of the G-E Oil Furnace at the inverted "white-hot" flame will show you that this furnace is entirely different from other types of oil-heating equipment. Different and better. More efficient. More economical. Safer. Quieter.

Don't fail to see this amazing G-E Oil Furnace. It offers the finest and cheapest type of automatic heat that money can buy. Write or telephone for free booklet, which describes its marvelous features.

ROBERT E. LEE TRIAL BEGUN IN U. S. COURT

nection with the bankrupt corporation was only casual; that he knew nothing of its financial secrets; that he, particularly, knew nothing about R. R. Bradley, and that he intended to prove that he, as well as the investors, was defrauded by Bradley.

Judge Barrett's swift and emphatic handling of the preliminary details yesterday indicated the trial will be held strictly to essentials and that there will be no wandering afield either by the government or the defense. Judge Barrett was impatient yesterday in his rulings from the bench and Lee, who had disquieted two federal judges on the grounds that he has no problems of prejudice in this trial, which will last probably two weeks, judging from the number of witnesses summoned by each side and the formidable array of documentary evidence inside 16 filing cabinets which line the wall of Judge Barrett's courtroom.

Picture of Health.
Lee was the picture of health as he appeared in court yesterday. He has lost that harassed, nervous air that characterized his appearance in federal court here several weeks ago when he made a futile three-day attempt to have the charges against him quashed. He was polished and urbane yesterday; moved quickly and easily; bowed deferentially to the judge; throttled his desire to argue as the judge overruled him; called for one glass of water throughout the day and consulted only one law book in an effort to prove to Judge Barrett that the court had erred.

Judge Barrett had ruled on one of Lee's motions. Lee opened a volume of federal reports and said:
"Your honor, here is a decision on the point on which you have just ruled. It is the case—"

Judge Barrett looked sharply at Lee.
"The decision has been made, has it not?"

"Yes, your honor," assented Lee, snapping the book shut and resuming his seat.

At another point Judge Barrett asked a question and Lee responded with:
"If the court, please, I will give you the history of that—"

"Now, one minute, please. I'll learn more rapidly if you answer my questions."

Lee answered the question, bowed and resumed his seat.

And, again, Judge Barrett summed up a point at issue and Lee bobbed up:
"Your honor, I want to state—"

Again, the judge interrupted:
"Do I state the point correctly?"

"Your honor, I wish—"

"Do I state the point correctly?"

"Yes, your honor."

Again Lee resumed his seat.

A few one-sided arguments of this nature within the first hour of court seemed to convince Lee that Judge Barrett was conducting court and Lee caught the spirit of the occasion.

He became more and more tractable and soon the trial was breezing along. The high note of the day came when Lee stood before the jury and told of his connection with the American Bond and Share Corporation as he will seek to prove it.

"I expect to prove," he told the jury, "that for three and a half years before January 1, 1933, I was incapacitated by tuberculosis of the spine and on the advice of doctors I had gone to Miami, Fla."

While in Florida, Lee said, he met Webb H. Vermilya, an Atlanta attorney, whom he had known for several years. He helped Vermilya with some work, he said, and in January, 1934, when he was in Atlanta, he looked up Vermilya, who was vice president and general counsel for the American Bond and Share Corporation. Vermilya has since died, having been killed in an automobile accident at Newman in 1934.

"Vermilya wanted me to stay in Atlanta to help in some matters he had in hand, but I had to go to hot Miami for my health. Later in 1934 I helped him prepare a statement for the Securities Exchange Commission, but I acted only as his associate counsel."

Resumed His Seat.
Lee said he helped Vermilya in other matters and that on August 3, 1934, he was paid in full by R. R. Bradley for his services as associate counsel. He did no work for Bradley or the corporation after that until December, 1934.

"At that time I defended my co-defendant, W. A. Smith, on charges of violating the securities act of the state of Alabama. I was paid a fee."

The only time he was ever recognized as an officer of the American Bond and Share Corporation, until this time, said Lee, was when it was necessary for him to sign a bond for the company. He was made a director.

"I was never accepted as an officer or looked on as an officer," said Lee. "Subsequently, I stepped out as a director. The bond I had signed was filed with the Securities Exchange Commission. I had no stock in the company and no connection with the company except in the casual manner I have outlined."

Retained January, 1935.
"On January 3, 1935, Bradley retained me as a special associate counsel and in the interim I had represented other persons against Bradley."

"I expect to show I am not a great lawyer," thundered Lee, and he warmed up to the subject.

Judge Barrett interrupted:
"Let's not go into that."

"It's in the indictment, your honor. I merely expect to show that I was so hogtied poor I accepted Vermilya's offer because I was physically and financially in need of employment. I was never paid any but reasonable fees."

Lee described a clash with Bradley. "Bradley was in a bad shape on the market. I asked him, are you solvent, could you liquidate? His reply was, 'Oh, yes.'"

"Then I learned that he was in a $400,000 pool and he couldn't liquidate. I told him he had better hire another lawyer. He asked me whom he could hire. I told him I was not recommending."

Charges Deception.
"I told him: 'You have deceived me. You have frequently said you could liquidate.'"

"Bradley pleaded: 'You are leaving me in the middle of the stream.'"

"I told him: 'You got yourself there.'"

Bradley left his office and went to the office of another Atlanta attorney, said Lee.

"They talked for two hours and I learned later that Bradley had taken a train for God knows where at the Brookwood station. All I know is that it was northbound."

Lee then told how he visited Bradley's home and told Bradley's son that his father owed him for telegrams, legal services and other items.

Judge Barrett interrupted to insist that such matters should be brought out in the evidence.

"Bradley Never Told."

"I stand corrected, your honor," said Lee, bowing. "I shall prove that B. R. Bradley never told me anything—he never told anyone anything about his financial affairs. He always concealed his losses. He concealed them from me. My defense will be that I acted in the utmost good faith; I had no knowledge of what happened before I entered the company and very little afterwards; I didn't do anything of which I am ashamed; I thought the company was perfectly solvent and I was not charged with the responsibility of its solvency."

United States Attorney Lawrence S. Camp is leading the prosecution of Lee and Smith. Helping in the government's case are Assistant United States Attorney M. Neil Andrews and Frank S. Righelmer, the Washington attorney for the Securities and Exchange Commission.

District Attorney Camp outlined the government's case to the jury, which is contained in a 47-count indictment. Fifty-six of the counts charge using the mails to defraud and the forty-seventh charges conspiracy in mail fraud.

Prosecution Charges.
Camp described Bradley's early organization of the company and told how Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, Ga., one of the victims, bought stock from Bradley and Smith and lent them money until they had obtained approximately $22,000. Mr. Camp said the government will prove that Bradley sold unsound stock again and again and paid dividends from the collections of the salesmen, while the company was making no profit.

Bradley, he said, had entered the scene as a counsellor who worked for the company and told Bradley's son that his father owed him for telegrams, legal services and other items.

Judge Barrett interrupted to insist that such matters should be brought out in the evidence.

"Bradley Never Told."

"I stand corrected, your honor," said Lee, bowing. "I shall prove that B. R. Bradley never told me anything—he never told anyone anything about his financial affairs. He always concealed his losses. He concealed them from me. My defense will be that I acted in the utmost good faith; I had no knowledge of what happened before I entered the company and very little afterwards; I didn't do anything of which I am ashamed; I thought the company was perfectly solvent and I was not charged with the responsibility of its solvency."

"I stand corrected, your honor," said Lee, bowing. "I shall prove that B. R. Bradley never told me anything—he never told anyone anything about his financial affairs. He always concealed his losses. He concealed them from me. My defense will be that I acted in the utmost good faith; I had no knowledge of what happened before I entered the company and very little afterwards; I didn't do anything of which I am ashamed; I thought the company was perfectly solvent and I was not charged with the responsibility of its solvency."

Lee then told how he visited Bradley's home and told Bradley's son that his father owed him for telegrams, legal services and other items.

Judge Barrett interrupted to insist that such matters should be brought out in the evidence.

MEYER CONDITION TERMED CRITICAL

Merchant Hurt Sunday by Hit-Run Motorcycle;
Negro Being Held.

Grady hospital physicians were battling late last night to save the life of Arthur Meyer, Atlanta merchant, who was described as in an extremely critical condition as the result of injuries suffered Sunday night at Broad and Peachtree streets when he was struck by a hit-and-run motorcyclist.

Mr. Meyer incurred a fracture of the skull, a broken leg and internal injuries when he was hurled about 25 feet by the speeding cycle. The driver maintained his balance and continued going, witnesses said.

Detective and Douglas LaPoe, assigned to the case, with only a meager description of the driver, and a hat and shirt button picked up at the scene, arrested Defat Jackson, 28-year-old negro, and charged him with suspicion of assault with intent to murder.

Jackson said that he was the driver of the cycle which struck Mr. Meyer, and claimed, police said, that he was at Little Five Points with friends at the time the accident occurred.

GENERAL STRIKE

Walkout on All U. S. Ships Sought.

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—An attempt to start a general strike of American ship crews here and a noisy court scene developed today in the feud between officers of the International Seamen's Union and a "provisional strike committee" of union members.

David E. Grange, vice president of the union, denied opposition claims the strike was already partly effective and said the real test would come Wednesday when the United States liner Washington is due to sail for Europe with a crew of about 700 men.

Hearings in the injunction suit brought by union officers to restrain striking seamen from representing that the union condones their action on the east coast were resumed. Seamen had to be silenced several times by the court for applauding or deriding witnesses.

EYELESS CHICKEN

Biddie Hatched Here Is Said
Normal Otherwise.

Ida Nelson, of 1170 Avenue E. Rockdale Park, is hunting the successor of P. T. Barnum, or someone who is interested in freaks.

She has, she reported yesterday to The Constitution, a chick, hatched Sunday and normal in every other respect except that it has no eyes. It is not merely blind, she says, but has no place on the head for eyes. She will attempt to raise it and then dispose of it to some circus owner or freak show.

"What kind of chickens have you?" she was asked.

"They're just chickens," she replied. "Kind of looks like Rhode Island Reds, except they're yellow."

Rattlesnakes Provide

Care for Fire Victim

DOOTHAN, Ala., May 4.—(AP)—Rattlesnakes—through their deadly venom—are paying a debt of mercy.

Jimmy Hyatt, age 8, was "doing just fine" at a Dothan hospital today after an operation and his father, Joe Hyatt, was not worrying about the bills—that's where the rattlesnakes come in.

Jimmy, who lives on the Pea river land project of the federal Resettlement Administration, was seriously burned February 25 as he attempted to stamp out a grass fire he thought threatened his home.

Yesterday doctors here grafted new skin on Jimmy's leg.

The boy's show of heroism in attempting to protect his home, which was not damaged—caught the pride of other workers on the resettlement project. Money was scarce, but rattlesnakes were not. The fixed price of venom was found to be $12 an ounce.

Now project workers are catching instead of killing rattlesnakes and extracting venom from their fangs for use in medical science. The money will go to settle the hospital bill.

BOY BADLY BURNED WORKING IN FIELD

Morrow Youth Believed to Have Come in Contact With Wire.

Walter McCullough, 16, of Morrow, Ga., was critically burned yesterday afternoon when, it is believed, he came in contact with high tension wires in field near Rock Out, below Forest Park.

McCullough's brother, Bill McCullough, 21, hearing screams, rushed to his brother's aid, he told police, and found him lying under the wires with his clothing blazing.

The older youth extinguished the flames and then carried his brother to the highway where he enlisted the aid of a passing motorist in bringing the injured boy to the hospital.

His condition was reported as critical late last night.

Paul Landers, 27, of 766 Paynes avenue, suffered severe burns of the left arm yesterday afternoon when an automobile on which he was working backfired and set fire to his gasoline-soaked overalls.

He was admitted to Grady hospital where his condition was reported as not serious unless complications develop.

DEFEAT ADMITTED BY SUGAR GROUP

Efforts Toward Unlimited Domestic Production Are Abandoned.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—(P)—Spokesmen for the congressional sugar bloc said today the group had abandoned efforts to win unlimited domestic sugar production.

They added, however, that a concession to domestic producers would be demanded by allotment of any increase in consumption to domestic producers. Off-shore producers would be excluded.

Pending legislation had proposed distribution of only 50 per cent of excess consumption estimates among continental producers, with off-shore producers receiving the remainder.

At a conference of bloc leaders with representatives of the farm administration sugar section and officers of national beet growers' organizations,

Representative Fred Cummings, democrat, Colorado, chairman of the bloc, said Agriculture Department spokesmen objected to removing restrictions on domestic production. They told the bloc he said the sugar section would oppose any change in the existing domestic and off-shore quotas as provided in the Costigan-Jones sugar control act.

Southern cane growers and eastern sugar beet growers had been especially active in demanding unrestricted production on the contention those areas could produce more than existing quotas.

Culbertson on Contract

CAPITALIZING OPPORTUNITY.

A bridge acquaintance recently poured a typical tale of woe into my weary and defenseless ears.

"Did you ever see such a lucky player as So-and-So?" (He named one of the country's outstanding experts.) "It is simply fantastic the things he gets away with! His opponents seem to get acute cases of brain fever when he becomes the declarer. They actually pour points into his lap. All he has to do is sit still and receive them!"

Having just watched the expert named play a few hands I was well prepared for rebuttal.

"Has it ever occurred to you," I asked, "that So-and-So is one of the most astute inducers and capitalizers of mistakes in the world of bridge? Let me show you a hand I just saw him play."

This was the hand. He sat South.

South, dealer.

GEORGIA HAS BALANCE

OF $5,732,477 IN CASH

Governor's Report for April 30 Is First Since Ousting of Treasurer.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

A net cash balance of $5,732,477.08 was shown yesterday Governor Talmadge's April 30 report on the condition of the state treasury.

The Governor made public the first full report on Georgia's fiscal affairs since de facto Treasurer J. B. Daniel succeeded ousted Treasurer George B. Hamilton February 24.

Commenting on the statement, Talmadge said: "More than $1,000,000 in gasoline taxes, collected by the state revenue commission, is not shown in this report."

Judge Claude Porter, of Rome, tied up this money by injunction. We are obeying all court orders.

The revenue from the gasoline tax has been placed in the treasury vault in a separate box and will not be touched until the court says we can.

This report shows Georgia is in the best financial condition she has been in since the War Between the States.

"We also have around $3,500,000 in banks tied up by other court orders. This gives us plenty of money and we don't have to borrow one cent."

"I haven't had to get a loan since I first year I was governor. I borrowed $2,000,000 then to see the schools through. That has been wiped out and we are going right ahead with the people's business with the cash."

Of the $5,732,477.08 cash balance on hand April 30, Governor Talmadge's figures show $639,685.92 in the general fund, which supplies the cash for operating the state government.

General fund spending runs around $10,000,000 annually. Many more millions come to the various agencies during the year but is specifically allocated to the agencies for certain purposes.

Highway Finances.

The largest spending department is highway. The Governor's report shows on April 30 the highway department had to its credit $1,498,055.89 from fuel oil taxes, $25,000 from the mileage tax, $993,828.73 from motor vehicle license fees and $1,344,936.80 from other departments in a revenue fund account.

This money was used by the Governor during the time when much of the state's money was tied up in banks after Talmadge ousted Hamilton and the latter placed $7,400,000 of depository bonds in the Federal Reserve Bank.

Some cash, other than the $2,500,000 in three Atlanta banks, which are in court now to determine who is the legal treasurer, still is being held up because similar institutions are awaiting the supreme court's decision on the treasurer and release of their bonds to the state.

The new tax, which is going to the education department for the public schools, totaled $372,542.90 for the first four months of the year.

JOHN HENRY JOHNSON IS LAID TO FINAL REST

Funeral services for John Henry Johnson, 20-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Johnson, of Western Heights, who was drowned last Wednesday in the Chahoonhoe river when seized with cramps while swimming, were held at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the graveside in Ocean View cemetery.

The Rev. W. S. Pruitt officiated and burial was in charge of the West Side Funeral Home.

Johnson's body was recovered at 12:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon about a mile below the spot where he went down. Dynamite was set off in the river in an effort to bring the body to the surface.

REV. T. C. BRAY RITES WILL BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for the Rev. Thomas C. Bray, for more than 40 years a Baptist minister serving numerous rural churches around Atlanta, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the chapel of Avery & Lowman with Dr. W. H. Knight officiating.

The Rev. Mr. Bray died Sunday at a private hospital at the age of 83. He had been retired from active service in the ministry for about seven years, but was an active member of the Tabernacle Baptist church.

Burial will be in the Antioch cemetery.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

My mother's marriage was a failure and she had very little happiness until her children grew up. We have done everything we could do to make up to her for what she missed. She has a good deal of the martyr about her and doesn't hesitate to say how sorry she feels for herself. Of course the life she has led has been one of her own choosing. She doesn't want to see any of us get married. She is constantly saying: "If you do get married see that you have this or that." The result of it is that I have not accepted the invitations extended me by the opposite sex and never intended to marry. Her experience has made me feel the need of my friends. I am self-supporting and don't see why I should continue to defer to her opinion as if I were a mere baby. Do you?

OBEDIENT DAUGHTER.

Answer:

Probably it is natural for a woman whose marriage has been a wash-out to warn her children against repeating her mistake but it is no less than wise for a mother to put herself and her woes in the way of her children's finding love and marriage. When she does this it is not so much a desire to keep them from unhappiness as it is to keep them at home to solace her for her unhappiness.

A woman recently returning from a long trip where she had the opportunity to observe a great many boys and girls, remarked: "I have discovered that the difference between a happy and unhappy girlhood is a boy-friend. Maybe there is a slight exaggeration in this observation but might be slight. Normally and naturally a young girl craves the companionship of the opposite sex. She wants a boyfriend to ask her for dates, take her to dances, send her corsages and candy, letters and telegrams. She wants to be admired, desired, adored and courted. Why not? Then isn't a parent unreasonably selfish to stand between her child and this natural heart's desire?"

When a girl is very young, dependent upon her parents for support, she has no alternative but obedience to her parents' rules and regulations. When she is old enough to make her living and think for herself, she shouldn't permit a mother to spoil her young ladyhood by separating her from the boys and she shouldn't let her mother's unhappy marriage poison her mind against matrimony. For what all is said and done the completed and full life for a woman is in her home with her husband and children.

The happy life for a girl consists in having pleasing association with boy-friends who come to her home, take her out and give her the opportunity to find the husband whom every girl dreams of finding.

NAZI AGENT ON TRIAL IN KIDNAPING PLOT

BASEL, Switzerland, May 4.—(P)—(Jewish Telegraph Agency).—Troops guarded the courtroom today as Hans Wesemann, Nazi agent, went on trial for the kidnaping more than a year ago of Berthold Jacob, German-Jewish journalist.

The prosecution, opening the case against Wesemann, charged he was a Gestapo agent since 1934 and had arrived in Basel in February, 1935, to prepare the abduction of the refugee.

If convicted of having been responsible for Jacob's imprisonment by the Nazis for more than a week, Wesemann faces a maximum prison term of eight years.

The abduction of Jacob took place in March, 1935.

MITTER HINTS TEST ON SENATE TRIAL

MIAMI, Fla., May 4.—(P)—Halsted L. Ritter confirmed reports today he was considering attacking constitutionality of his removal as federal judge there by the United States senate in last month.

"My plans are incubating and I'll soon be ready to make an announcement," the gray-haired former jurist declared in the federal building's judicial suite which he has not vacated since being ousted on charges of bringing the Miami court into "scandal and disrepute," by his actions.

Cartersville Provides Setting For Enjoyable Bridal Festivities

By Sally Forth.

WHEN lovely and blond Florence Hancock became Mrs. Melbourne Lee Martin in Cartersville last Saturday evening she was radiantly beautiful in her wedding gown of mousseline de soie, which became her diminutive size to perfection. Her exquisite bridal veil was that worn by Frances Starbuck when she became Mrs. Charles Patton in the early spring of last year. Florence and Frances were roommates at the University of Georgia for two years, and although Frances and Charlie have lived in Watertown, N. Y., since their marriage, the friendship of the two girls has not been severed by their absence.

Cartersville was the scene of much festivity for several weeks prior to the wedding, and many unusually delightful parties were given in honor of the young couple. One of the most unique of these was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Guy Parmenter, to which members of the wedding party, out-of-town guests and members of the family were invited. Cocktails were served on the spacious side porch of the lovely Parmenter home, which is located just outside of Cartersville, after which the guests repaired to the shady lawn for a picnic luncheon.

Each of the boys present was presented with attractively decorated luncheon baskets, which were daintily covered with orchid, pink, green and yellow crepe paper, and in each box was the name of one of the young girls present. In this agreeable manner the guests found their escorts for the afternoon, and enjoyed their enticing lunches seated in colorful steamer chairs in the shade of spreading oak trees.

Delightful luncheons, buffet suppers, dances and breakfasts filled the social calendar prior to the lovely ceremony on Saturday. After a reception given by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Hancock, at their home on Highland view, Florence and her attractive husband left for a trip to North Carolina, after which they will reside in Miami.

WHEN society's exodus to Lakemont begins, summer is here in earnest. The vanguard leaves next Friday, so you can safely get out your swim suit and your backless sports frocks, provided, of course, if you expect to go in for a coat of tan.

The occasion is to be a grand house party, the first of the season, which will be held at the handsome Nunnally lodge overlooking Lake Rabun. The guests will leave by motor Friday afternoon after school, chaperoned by Mrs. R. M. Crumley and Mrs. Jack Pappenhimer. And so much fun is in prospect that already the days till Friday are dragging endlessly.

Comprising the house party will be Betty Yopp, Anne Pappenhimer, Virginia Willitt, Elizabeth Fuller, Don Proctor, McKee Nunnally, Bobbie Crumley and Wick Goldsmith.

LAST Saturday morning an Atlanta sportsman called his wife over the telephone from his office. "I want to bet on the Derby," he told her, "and you must pick the horse for me."

"But I know nothing about the horses," she replied. "I don't even know their names."

"Get this morning's issue of 'The Constitution,'" he came back. "You'll find them on the sports page."

A silence of several minutes ensued while his wife located the Derby list. At length she returned to the phone.

"I have selected one," she said. "It was a bold venture when I

Sea Island Summer Plans Are Interesting.

SEA ISLAND, Ga., May 4.—Summer at Sea Island will be even gayier than usual this season for Atlantans, as plans for occupying residences on Sea Island indicate. During the summer months at Georgia's coastal resort, daily orchestra concerts beside the Casino pool and Sunday water sports programs assemble large gatherings of Atlantans, as well as numerous easterners and other southerners. An innovation will be dancing on the broad deck beside the pool. A dance floor has been erected and popular events are the evening swimming parties featured by swimming and diving exhibitions, and followed by dancing by the pool. Soft-hued spotlights lend glamour to the al fresco setting for these parties and indirect lighting beneath the waters of the pool gives double illumination to the swimming and diving exhibitions.

Arriving in May to join the Sea Island colony will be Mr. and Mrs. Joel Hunter Jr., with their sturdy young son, Joel III, and their mother, Mrs. Casper Johnson. Dr. and Mrs. William O. Martin, with their young daughters, Trudy and Jane, and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Harris, of Charlotte, N. C., will arrive May 15 for a month. Mr. and Mrs. John M. Smith will reach Sea Island May 10 to spend a month.

June will see the arrival in Sea Island of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. N. Conrad, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Kueffle, Mr. and Mrs. William Huger, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fleming, Mrs. William Healey, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Owens, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Porter, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Gargus, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Emmert, all of Atlanta, and Mr. and Mrs. B. P. O'Neal Jr., of Macon.

The beach residence being built for Judge and Mrs. Shepherd Bryan is nearing completion and they plan to spend part of the summer at Sea Island. Cardui Helped Three Times

"I used Cardui when a girl, for cramps, and it helped then," writes Mrs. Ike Wright, of Sealy, Texas. Next after marriage, she reports having taken Cardui when she felt weak, nervous and restless before her children were born. And during middle life, it helped her again.

"I was miserable," she explains. "I did not have an appetite. I was very blue and upset. I remembered Cardui had helped me, so I took it again and soon began to pick up. I ate and had more strength. I kept up the Cardui and did not have any more trouble. It is any wonder that I recommend Cardui to all my friends?"

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. It does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.—(adv.)

My Day By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Sunday.—I started Saturday fairly early with a ride at 8:30. This hour was much better for the dogs and horses who were beginning to find the middle of the day too warm for exertion.

I was home and dressed and at the Earle theater at 10:40 to say a word to the packed theater of crippled children who were enjoying Major Bowes' artists. The faces before me were all enthusiastic and alive and happy, and I hope they carried the happiness back into what must of necessity, be rather restricted lives.

From there I went to the Girl Scout practice house for my annual visit. It was very interesting for they were holding their tests. In the first room we visited, two young girls were bathing the fattest, jolliest 10-month-old baby I have ever seen. She actually bore the photographer's flashlights without wailing, which was a triumph of good temper.

In the next room a real little girl lay in bed while another one made it up with the "patient" in it. Beyond this room girls were sewing and there was quite an exhibition of garments they had made. Downstairs a group was setting a table with a really nice arrangement of flowers as a centerpiece.

In the kitchen they were actually turning rolls out of pans and some were given me in a basket to carry home. Over the rolls a little girl put a cloth embroidered, as nicely as anyone could wish, with my initials and "G. S." in all the corners. I went into the garden for a moment where they were taking their geology test, and they served us with orangeade and Girl Scout cookies. I left them with a real sense of satisfaction in their achievements.

The President got off at noon with Colonel and Mrs. Murray, and one or two others for a night on the Potomac river.

Mrs. Percy Pennyacker, who is one of the guests I always love to see arrive and grieve to see depart, left for Pittsburgh at 1:40.

At 2 o'clock nearly 4,000 young people whose graduation this year from schools in and around Washington, were received. I always enjoy watching these young things go past, wondering what they will do with their lives and how fortune will treat them.

Two or three visitors for tea, a speech for the International Students' Club in the evening and our son, John, flying down from Cambridge to try out some horses on Sunday. I was able at least to meet him and dine with him, but I had to leave him at midnight on Saturday to spend today in New York with my daughter, who is celebrating her birthday. We picked up the children near the city and I am taking the mid-night train back to Washington so as to be there early Monday morning.

FORTY ARE INJURED

IN ANTI-CLERIC RIOTS

Catholic Churches, Monasteries Levelled by Fire in Madrid.

MADRID, May 4.—(AP)—Near

Two score persons were wounded and valuable church property was destroyed today in the most violent anti-clerical rioting in Spain since the left election victory in February.

Rioters set fire to more than a dozen Roman Catholic churches, schools and monasteries. The violence began yesterday when rumors were spread among leftists that nuns had distributed poisoned candy.

Two unns were wounded when the came into the line of fire as they le children from a burning convent school. The disorders centered in the capital.

Heavy forces of shock police were powerless to cope with mobs of rioting extremists, aroused by the whiped rumors that the Catholic clergy was "poisoning children."
